Study Asked By Roosevelt As PWA Row Flares Again

Relative Cost of Agency Compared With WPA to Be Investigated.

Labor Stipulation Protested by Ickes

He Urges Modification of Rule Providing 100 Pct. Relief Workers.

By Robert C. Albright.

The President has ordered a study of the relative costs and merits of WPA and PWA construction projects, long a subject of rivalry and dispute between the emergency administrations headed by Harry L. Hopkins and Harold L. Ickes, it was learned last night.

The disclosure came as the controversy over how PWA money should be spent flared again, with fresh protests that the 100 per cent relief labor limitation placed by the President on PWA funds was making it impossible for the Public Works Administration to go ahead with approved projects in several States.

Public Works Administrator Ickes told reporters he would like to see the 100 per cent relief labor requirement modified by the President. He is finding it increasingly difficult to spend the $300,000,000 made available by the 1936 relief act on projects that can draw their labor, both skilled and unskilled, entirely from relief rolls.

Study Under Way.

Budget Bureau officials declined last night to discuss the significance of the projected investigation into the comparative efficiency of Works Progress Administration and Public Works Administration construction operations, but confirmed the fact that such a study was getting under way.

It was learned that either the Budget Bureau directly, or some other Treasury agency, such as the Procurement Division, would conduct the inquiry. Officials declared that in the absence of Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell, who is on vacation, they could not discuss the scope of the investigation, or what phases of cost, merit or efficiency would be weighed. At the Public Works Administration, officials said they knew nothing about the inquiry.

The study is the culmination of sharp controversy between Hopkins' and Ickes' organizations during the last session of Congress over which agency should administer construction features of the $1,423,000,000 relief fund.

Compromise Reached.

As the bill was passed by the House, Hopkins would have had complete control. Led by Representative Alfred F. Beiter (Democrat), of New York, a group of House members sought to earmark $700,000,000 of the fund for Ickes, claiming that projects of more permanent value would thus be assured, and the cost would not be in excess of WPA relief labor. A compromise finally was reached in the Senate, where it was arranged for Ickes to obtain $300,000,000 in funds through RFC sale of securities held by the PWA.

With sufficient approved projects to spend the entire $300,000,000, the Public Works Administration immediately found itself hedged in by a White House requirement that all of the labor on PWA jobs be taken from relief rolls.

Despite the highly skilled workers required on some of the PWA enterprises, the rule was rigidly enforced in initial allotments for 352 PWA projects, involving a total estimated construction cost of $50,774,196, approved last week. Grants of $22,742,034, and secured loans of $2,142,000, were included in the list.

Under the procedure, Ickes' PWA had to submit each of its approved projects to Hopkins' WPA, which checked relief rolls to see if there was adequate relief labor available near the site to do the work. When the initial list came back, projects in 11 States had been dropped.

2 Wrestlers Scare Man Into Surrender

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., Aug. 4.—A Bristol resident, later committed to a State institution, barricaded himself in a house here and threatened violence to anyone who sought to enter.

While officers were pondering how best to handle the situation, two wrestlers, Ole Anderson and Ivan Vacturoff, volunteered their services and entered the house.

The wrestlers glowered, using their best grimaces. The barricaded man appraised their nearly 500 pounds of beef and brawn, decided discretion was the better part of valor, and made a docile exit.

"It was no trouble at all," Anderson told the chief of police.

Hamilton Wins Congress Fight In Virginia Poll

Portsmouth Publisher Is Democrats' Choice Over Darden.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 4 (AP).—Norman R. Hamilton, publisher of the Portsmouth Star, and an ardent champion of the Roosevelt New Deal, today defeated Representative Colgate Darden, of Norfolk, for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Second Virginia District. Congressman A. J. Montague emerged with a close victory over Dave E. Satterfield, in the Third District.

With the Second District complete Hamilton led Darden 17,230 to 15,444 votes.

Mr. Hamilton, in addition to championing the New Deal, has been a vigorous critic of Senator Harry F. Byrd, and the State Democratic organization headed by the junior Senator.

With votes from 118 out of 122 precincts tabulated in the Third District, Montague had 12,163 votes to 11,301 for Satterfield, a former Commonwealth's attorney of Richmond. Satterfield conceded his defeat to the veteran of 24 years service in Washington.

The other seven Congressmen from Virginia, all Democrats, had no primary opposition. Senator Carter Glass also has no opposition in the primary general elections.

Capper Leads.

By the United Press.

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 4.—United States Senator Arthur Capper, Republican, took a commanding lead over his two opponents for renomination tonight on complete returns from 360 of the State's 2,690 precincts.

Capper had 24,467 votes; H. L. Stout, 4,128, and Walter Neibarger, 3,076.

On the Democratic ticket, Omar B. Ketchum's vote for the same precincts was 12,493. Dempster O. Potts, Townsend follower, was second, with 3,193; Robert George had 1,224, and John H. Arnett, 712.

Walter Huxman, Hutchinson attorney, took an early lead over Jonathan M. Davis, of Bronson, Townsend candidate, in the Democratic race for the gubernatorial nomination. With completed returns from 344 precincts Huxman had 12,216 votes and Davis, 8,597.

Missouri Vote.

St. Louis, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Candidates indorsed by Missouri's Democratic machine, headed by Thomas J. Pendergast, Kansas City, tonight took an early lead in scattered returns from today's primary election.

Maj. Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., nurseryman, backed by Pendergast for Governor, received 11,867 votes in 152 of the State's precincts as compared with 7,463 for William Hirth, Columbia farm leader running on an anti-bossism platform.

Romjue Leads.

Representative M. A. Romjue, Macon, First District, had 1,057 votes. His opponent, State Budget Commissioner Charles F. Carter, Unionville, received 843 in five precincts.

Representative William L. Nelson, Columbia, had 579 as against 152 for former Representative R. D. Johnson, Marshall, and 17 for Longstreet Cleveland, Columbia, in the Second District.

Jesse W. Barrett, St. Louis attorney, led the Republican Gubernatorial contest with 1,347 votes in 32 precincts. James J. Barrett, St. Louis, had 224 and C. G. Lambert, Kansas City, 247.

Owens Sets 2 Records; U. S. Makes Sweep

Negro Paces Americans in Olympic Rout for Men's Track Title

Hardin, in 400 Hurdles, Woodruff in 800, Miss Stephens Win.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

Berlin, Aug. 4.—Scaling the heights to Olympic track and field conquest unknown since pre-War days, the United States today ended all doubt about team supremacy, capturing first places in all three men's events, dividing honors in the two women's contests with Germany and producing the first double winner of the eleventh Olympiad in an amazingly unbeatable Jesse Owens.

Ohio State's redoubtable Negro shattered Olympic records most every time he made a move in the day-long competition in two events. He twice bettered the 200-meter mark, coasting to 21.1 second victories in the qualifying trials, and then climaxed the day by bettering the broad jump mark five times, winding up with a final leap of 8.06 meters (26 feet 5 21-64 inches).

Hardin, Woodruff Win.

This jumping feat, which buried the previous mark of 7.73 meters, (25 feet 4 11-64 inches), made by Edward Hamm in the 1928 games, gave a second gold medal and oak tree to the tan thunderbolt, who is poised to complete a triple triumph in the decisive 200-meter tests tomorrow.

The decisive but non-record breaking victories of Glenn Hardin, Greenwood, Miss., in the 400-meter hurdles and John Hughey Woodruff, Connellsville, Pa., Negro, in the 800-meter run, combined with Owens' latest contribution ended any idea that the point battle for the team title will be close.

Completion of three of the eight days of Olympic blue ribbon competition found the United States totaling 83 points in eight events—more than double Germany's 38¾ points. The Teutons had the satisfaction of pushing Owens to record-jumping flights, but picked up only 7½ points while Finland went scoreless and remained in third place with 20¼ points.

Helen Stephens, of Fulton, Mo., sharing the feminine spotlight with Germany's record-breaking discus thrower, Gisela Mauermayer, continued the United States' sprinting sweep. The Missourian beat five rivals decisively, including Poland's defending champion, Stella Walsh, in the 100-meter women's final, bettering the listed world record for the third time. She won the title in 11.5 seconds, one-tenth of a second short of her own best mark in yesterday's trials.

Lash, Zamperini Qualify.

Meanwhile, two mates, Dusky Matthew (Mack) Robinson, of Pasadena, Calif., and Bobby Packard, of Rockford, Ill., University of Georgia freshman, accompanied Owens through the 200-meter trials into the semifinals.

Don Lash, of Auburn, Ind., and Louis Zamperini, of Torrance, Calif., emerged unimpressively among 15 qualifiers in the 5,000-meter trials in which the finals will be held Friday. Tom Deckard, of Bloomington, Ind., the third American 5,000-meter entry, was eliminated.

The weather turned blustery with

Kaslaskia Family Again in Trouble On Vending Count

After a while, maybe, the Kaslaskia family is going to learn that it's illegal to sell flowers in front of the Veterans' Bureau. Mrs. Fannie Kaslaskia, 35, was arrested again there yesterday.

The arrest marked the second time within a week that the Kaslaskia flower-selling habit has clashed with the law. John Kaslaskia, head of the house of flowers, was arrested in front of the Veterans' Bureau last Wednesday.

Mrs. Kaslaskia first found the law interfering with her business on the day before Memorial Day, when she had scraped $25 together to make a "clean-up." She was arrested then and given a $3 fine, which was later suspended.

After the arrest yesterday Mrs. Kaslaskia was taken to the Women's Bureau and then released after posting $5 collateral. She will appear in Police Court this morning.

Capt. Arthur E. Miller told reporters that he had warned Mrs. Kaslaskia that the law prohibited vending between Sixth and Nineteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue and K street northwest.

Spanish Loyalists Fire on Reich Ship After Germans Confer With Rebels; Dictatorship Is Declared in Greece

Martial Law Is Set Up Under King's Auspices After Reds Strike.

Premier Dissolves Deputies' Chamber

All Elections Postponed; Guards Posted Around Power, Gas Plants.

By the United Press.

Athens (Wednesday), Aug. 5.—Premier Gen. John Metaxas early today declared a dictatorship under the auspices of King George II.

Metaxas also declared martial law and dissolved the Chamber of Deputies after Communists called a general strike.

The King, fearing large scale Communist disturbances throughout the country, consented to delcaration of martial law. However, the country was quiet early today.

All elections were ordered postponed indefiniately.

The general strike was called in protest against the government's decision for compulsory arbitration in all labor disputes.

Confined to Barracks.

Troops and police were confined to their barracks. Strong guards were posted around all power stations and gas works.

The nation last November 3 overwhelmingly approved restoration of the monarchy headed by King George, and on November 25, 1935, he returned to Greece after 12 years' exile. He was the first of the monarchs who lost their thrones as result of the World War to be restored.

His recall followed a bloodless coup d'etat on October 10, which overthrew the republican government. The movement was headed by the late Gen. George Kondylis, who proclaimed himself deputy premier and regent and asked King George, then in England, to return immediately. However, the King awaited until after the plebiscite.

Years of Struggle.

The restoration was preceded by many years of unceasing and bloody struggle for political control of the Hellenic state.

The turmoil reached a climax March 1, 1935, when a rebellion broke out. The movement was quickly put down on land, but the rebels, headed by the late Eleutherios Venizelos nine times premier, seized five warships in the port of Athens and went to Crete. Loyalists airplanes bombed the vessels. Later the rebel crews abandoned them.

Power Boat, Afire, Drifts on Potomac; Crew of Two Saved

The engine of a 35-foot cruiser, the Delia, exploded on the Potomac River early today, forcing both its occupants to jump overboard.

George G. Arendes, 610 G street southeast, a policeman at the Seventh Precinct, and owner of the craft, was burned slightly on his hand, and Wilfred J. Moss, 44, of the Harrison Hotel, escaped injury.

The ship, which exploded off Hains Point, made a spectacular sight as it drifted down the river toward Alexandria after its occupants had been rescued.

The fire boat Firefighter which was summoned struck the shallows when she was about to reach the stricken craft and was forced to put back to her station.

Rescuers took the men to safety after they had leaped from the flaming craft.

Those who pulled the owner and his companion to safety were Humphrey Daniel and Richard Johnson, Gabriel Murphy, Irving Bortman, Baldwin Cook and Murray Hanson. They were in nearby craft.

The fire was discovered by a woman, who was driving in her automobile along the speedway at Hains Point. She saw the reflection of the blaze and called police.

The final count showed Logan, 182,089; Beckham, 179,024.

Latest Developments in Spain's Civil War

French Planes Sent to Border; War Aid Hinted

Step Is Called Beginning of Race to Help Rival Factions in Spain.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 4.—France tonight rushed six war planes to her southern border—a warning she may deliver supplies to Spain unless European powers heed her plea for neutrality to stave off widespread war.

Fear that international conflict might arise from the Spanish civil war mounted rapidly with reports that two German warships dropped anchor today in Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, and that their officers called on Rebel Commander Francisco Franco.

(The German imperial government in 1911 dispatched a gunboat to the Moroccan port of Agadir, an action interpreted as a threat to French interests there. The incident stirred both France and England and nearly precipitated a major conflict.)

Freefor-all Race.

Leftist France saw in today's development and the earlier flight of armed Italian planes to Morocco the beginning of a free-for-all race to arm the warring factions, authoritative sources said.

The result, it was felt here, would be quick and drastic—a bitter war to determine whether Marxist-socialism or Fascist dictatorship would be dominant in the European world.

Only one thing could stave off this danger, the French government contended: Speedy acceptance of her proposal that European powers agree to supply neither rebel nor loyalist Spanish forces with the tools of war.

But, it was asserted strongly, France will not be left behind in the arms race if the neutrality agreement is not effected.

This was explained as the reason for dispatching the six pursuit planes to the south. They took off from Villacoublay for Toulouse, ordered to await instructions there. At a word from Paris they could hop quickly to Madrid.

Wants Portugal Included.

The planes originally were built for Lithuania, but were said now to have been purchased by the Spanish government. Their presence in the south, it was indicated, was intended as a concrete warning of French determination.

[Germany's willingness to collaborate in neutrality efforts was made provisional upon Soviet Russia's readiness to withhold aid from the embattled Madrid Popular Front government, the United Press reported.

Following a call today at the Wilhelmstrasse by French Ambassador Francois Poncet, it was reported reliably that the German spokesman replied that for the present Germany could take no stand because of Russia's alleged dubious attitude—Editor's note.]

Great Britain wanted Portugal included in the agreement, it was stated here, but would make the pact effective as soon as Italy signs.

Minister of foreign affairs Yvon Delbos conferred with the Italian ambassador today. Ambassador Albornoz of Spain, whose Leftist gov-

Spain's Position and Holdings Make World Crisis of Civil War

One Nation After Another Gradually Is Being Drawn Into Maelstrom, With All of Europe's Major Powers Directly Concerned.

By Barnett Nover.

Member of The Post's Editorial Staff.

The civil war now raging in Spain began purely as a domestic struggle between the forces of revolution and the forces of reaction.

But with each passing day it is assuming continental proportions as one nation after another is, willingly or unwillingly, being drawn into the maelstrom.

The reason for this development with its terrifying possibilities of another world war, or at least an intensification of the struggle now going on in many lands between the Fascist and proletarian elements, is not hard to find.

All Directly Concerned.

Every one of the major European powers is directly concerned in the outcome of the Spanish civil war. Spain not only is a battleground between groups that find a counterpart in every part of Europe; it also occupies a place of strategic importance in the Mediterranean. And that sea has become in recent months one of the great focal points of international rivalries. Should Spain be weakened, more than one nation will seek to become heir to its holdings, particularly Morocco, the Canary Islands, the Balearics.

It is the combination of these two factors that has transformed the Spanish crisis into a European, a world crisis. And for the same reason it is proving extremely difficult to confine the war now raging in Spain within the confines of that republic.

In the last 15 years Europe has been divided into three camps. In the East there was Russia, openly proclaiming the creed of world revolution and the dictatorship of the proletariat. In Italy since 1922, in Germany since 1931, in other nations such as Poland, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Hungary, Austria at one time or another in the course of the years, democratic governments have given way to dictatorships.

Democracy on Defensive.

Only in Great Britain, France, the Scandinavian countries, the Low Countries and Czechoslovakia has democracy survived. But even in these lands it is on the defensive. Within them Left elements have sought to transform the existing regimes along Socialist, if not Communist lines. In every nation, even the older democracies, Fascist movements, with the usual trappings of colored shirts, uniforms, Fuehrers and Duces, have arisen. As the depression deepened, democracy more and more was ground between the upper and nether millstones of Fascism and Marxism.

Nowhere more clearly than in Spain, where the struggle was until now free of international complications, has the fight been revealed in all its naked essentials. The democratic republic that came into being in April, 1931, following the fall and flight of Alfonso XIII sought to transform the most backward nation in Western Europe into an advanced liberal nation. At first the reactionaries rushed into their storm cellars. But before two years were up, as the republic failed to carry out the implications of the revolution, they were back in full force.

From 1933, the reactionaries were in command of the situation and by the fall of 1934 were sufficiently confident to demand the government. That was the signal for an uprising of the Fascist elements which left bloody scars. In the mining region of the Asturias in particular, where the Left revolutionists held out longest, the uprising was put down with a bloody hand by Moorish troops imported to do the dirty work of the Madrid reactionaries. That event has not been forgotten and helps explain why neither side is giving quarter to the other in the present civil war.

Early this year the Leftists—Liberal Republicans, Socialists, Syndicalists, Anarchists, Communists closed their ranks and under the leadership of Manuel Azana, himself a moderate, won a victory at the polls. But this victory was immediately followed by dissension among the elements composing the Popular Front.

Would Become Fascist.

The pressure steadily increased to compel the government to embark on a radical course. It was a pressure not merely from individuals and parties, but from circumstances. The average Spanish worker or peasant is desperately poor and the depression has not made his lot any better. But the more the government moved toward the fulfillment of the 1931 program—the division of large estates, the confiscation of the property of the church and the religious orders, the enactment of laws favorable to labor, the secularization of education—the greater was the resentment among the conservatives.

The latter had behind them the army. Even during the early days of the republic the army had not been purged of its royalist and reactionary elements. It remained the bulwark of the Spain which, on paper, had disappeared.

The weakness displayed by the Left Front government, the growing dissension among its followers, seemed to the reactionaries to provide the opportunity they needed to overthrow the republic and establish in its place a militarist-Fascist dictatorship. Three weeks ago, in Spanish Morocco, Gen. Francisco Franco gave the signal for revolt. Rebellion broke out all over Spain.

At this very moment Spain became an international problem. For it was clear that the most likely outcome of the struggle between the loyalists and the rebels would be the re-establishment of an extremist regime.

Should the rebels win, Spain would inevitably become Fascist; a victory for the government would mean the certain radicalization of the regime. To save the republic the Madrid government

The Spanish Revolt.

A German freighter was fired on by a Loyalist Spanish destroyer in Moroccan territorial waters after two German warships appeared at Ceuta, Morocco, and their officers reportedly conferred with Gen. Francisco Franco, rebel chieftain.

Premier Metaxas of Greece declared a dictatorship under auspices of King George II after Communists called a general strike. Martial law was declared.

Hundreds were slain as rebels and Loyalists locked in battle in the Guadarrama Mountains outside Madrid in what may prove to be the decisive engagement of the civil war. Loyalists claimed victory.

France spurred efforts to obtain neutrality guarantees as fear grew that the Spanish revolt may spread into international conflict. Six French warplanes were dispatched to the southern border as a warning that war supplies will be sent to Spain if the neutrality pact is not quickly agreed to.

Rebels and Loyalists massed troops in both north and south for San Sebastian and Seville encounters.

Loyalist troops were dispatched to Palma in the Balearic Islands.

Two rebel seaplanes were shot down in a battle at Gibraltar.

Freighter Is Attacked.

By the United Press.

Tangier, International Morocco Zone, Aug. 4.—The German freighter Sevilla was fired on today by the Loyalist Spanish destroyer Almirante Valdees off Larache, members of the crew reported upon arrival of the vessel here. The attack followed a visit of two German warships to the harbor at Ceuta, Morocco, during which their officers were reported to have called on Rebel Commander Francisco Franco.

Subsequently the destroyer requested the German ship to leave Moroccan territorial waters, which the Madrid government has declared a region within which a state of war exists.

The Sevilla suffered no damage, but the fact it was under fire followed closely upon friendly ceremonial exchanges between rebel commanders in Spanish Morocco and officers aboard the German pocket battleship Deutschland and the destroyer Luchs. The German ships left Ceuta for an unknown destination.

Man Dies, Another Prostrated by City's Heat; Mercury Soars to 95; Showers Bring Relief

The first heat death here in almost a month was recorded late yesterday, as the temperature soared to a maximum of 95 degrees, accompanied by excessive humidity.

Lee Taylor, 40, described by police as a native of the West Indies, collapsed in front of his quarters, 608 D street northwest, and died a few minutes after being taken to Casualty Hospital. The heat also felled Elmer Evans, colored, 41, of the 2000 block of Delaware avenue southeast, who collapsed in the downtown section. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said his condition was not serious.

Temporary relief from the heat came last night when clouds drifted before the moon and a light rain began to fall. However, the reading was 82 at 10:45 p. m. Cooler weather, followed by showers tonight and tomorrow, were predicted by the forecaster.

Much of yesterday's suffering was due to the humidity, which was 60 per cent at 9 a. m. and 41 at 4 p. m. Thousands of Washingtonians sought relief from the heat in Potomac and Rock Creek parks, around the Speedway and wherever else they might find surcease from the weather.

Many who had planned to spend the night beneath the summer stars scurried for shelter last night as the rain began to fall.

Heavy attendance was reported at the city's swimming pools. Likewise there were hundreds of picnickers in Rock Creek Park and at Hains Point at supper time.

In the Northwest section an aged mule appeared, pulling a junk cart and wearing a battered straw hat fitted over its long ears.

Soft drink stands reported no cause for complaint, and mugs clicked in cafes and beer gardens as the city sizzled.

Scandal Hinted In G.O.P. Reply To Ickes Attack

Spangler Charges PWA 'Shakes Down' Contractors on Projects.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes' radio speech last night criticizing Gov. Alf M. Landon brought two formal statements of reply today from Republican national headquarters.

Harrison E. Spangler, of Chairman John D. M. Hamilton's executive staff, made counter charges that there was a "matter bordering on a national scandal" in connection with the PWA which Secretary Ickes heads.

"Contractors, architects and material men," Spangler's statement asserted, "are being shaken down to pay for New Deal propaganda * * * in the guise of PWA ads."

Part of Program.

Spangler added a charge that Secretary Ickes' speech was part of a program intended to "belittle Landon." The Republican spokesman declared: "This plan to smear Landon originated partly with Mr. Roosevelt himself and partly with two of his close advisers in New York, who, but for their Roosevelt support, would certainly be classed as 'princes of privilege.'"

He did not name the two.

The second statement was issued by former Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, of Ohio, who took up his duties today as an assistant to Chairman Hamilton.

He said assertions that the Republican nominee was "linked with big business" were "obviously built up for political consumption" and added, "the Republican Party and its candidate, Gov. Landon, are pledged to curb monopolistic practices."

Labor Views.

Spangler's statement also contained a description of Gov. Landon's labor views.

"Not even the hard blowing Secretary of the Interior can destroy Gov. Landon's position on the labor question," he said.

"He has made it clear * * * that he believes in and sympathizes with the right of labor to protect its position and to achieve the rewards to which it is justly entitled by organizing in labor unions, which naturally implies collective bargaining, with the same protection accorded to labor organizers that every other law-abiding citizen is entitled to have.

"What is more, Gov. Landon has practiced what he now preaches."

Democrats "Desperate."

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—A Republican leader here today declared the speech criticizing Gov. Alf M. Landon, made by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes last night, showed the Democrats were "desperate."

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., manager of the Republican campaign in the East said:

"From a Republican standpoint it was most encouraging. When they make speeches of that type, it shows how desperate they are."

Receives Telegrams.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes said here yesterday he had received a number of telegrams congratulating him for his speech attacking Gov. Alf Landon Monday night, but that he had received one before he spoke criticizing him.

The telegram was dated Bronxville, New York, Ickes said, and told him that "patriotic Americans will resent your criticism of Gov. Landon tonight."

Commenting on the assertion by Herbert Spangler at Chicago, Ickes said:

"Mayn't we say anything about their man? Are they going to wrap him up in cotton batting and put him in a glass case? I thought they invited careful scrutiny of his record."

In one of his regular broadcasts under the auspices of the Republican National Committee, William Hard, political commentator, said last night a couple had been evicted from the subsistence homestead community at Austin, Minn., on the charge they were not sufficiently "collective minded."

Hard said the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Draegert, objected to the prospective expenditure of $10,000 on a community building which, he added, the Resettlement Administration said was necessary in order to teach the homesteaders sewing, baking and canning.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, said yesterday the projected national conference of Progressives would be held probably late in August or early in September, with Chicago as the likely meeting place. Delay in calling the conference had given rise in some political circles to speculation that it might not be held.

La Follette supported President Roosevelt in the 1932 campaign.

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 4 (U.P.).—A Yale professor today charged Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas with responsibility for lowered educational standards in his State.

Prof. Jerome Davis, of the department of social ethics, told the fifty-first annual convention of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor that the Republican Presidential nominee had caused closing of more than 400 rural schools in Kansas.

The national rating of Kansas' educational system has dropped from fifteenth to twenty-seventh during Landon's gubernatorial regime, Davis said.

Town in Kansas Greets Landon At Primaries

G. O. P. Nominee Drives Home to Vote; Discusses Buffalo Speech.

By the Associated Press.

Independence, Kans., Aug. 4.—Gov. Alf M. Landon came home to vote in the Kansas primary today and receive a neighborly welcome from townsfolk who greeted him for the first time as a Presidential candidate.

Casting his ballot, which he termed "a great privilege," was the major business of his 180-mile motor trip from Topeka. But since it was his first home-coming as the Republican Presidential nominee, well-wishers arranged two functions in his honor and much of his day was spent shaking hands and renewing acquaintances.

Landon voted in a downtown automobile salesroom. Onlookers laughed when Mrs. Forrest Wyrick, judge, asked his "party affiliation" and Landon replied firmly: "Republican."

When he left the booth, newsmen asked "how it feels as a citizen to exercise the right to vote."

"Its a great privilege," the candidate replied. "Every American citizen should qualify as a voter and exercise the right of casting an honest vote in the election of this free-thinking, free-speaking country of ours.

"At this time when the citizens of many other nations are denied the right of suffrage, the importance of our citizens voting is greatly emphasized."

Landon reached this town of 14,000 shortly before noon after a three and a half hour drive from Emporia, where he was the overnight guest of William Allen White, the editor. On the last 100 miles of his drive he was accompanied by Edwin F. Jaeckle, Republican chairman of Erie County, N. Y., who joined the Governor's automobile party near Emporia.

Jaeckle said he came to discuss plans for the Governor's Buffalo speech late this month. At a Riverside Park luncheon, where places were laid for 200 guests, Mrs. Grace Miles, president, presented to Landon what she said was "the charter of the first Landon Business Women's League Organized in the United States."

Thanking the League for the charter, Landon said "I do not recall any meeting that has meant more to me than this greeting from old friends and neighbors."

"This is not so much of a tribute to myself as it is a demonstration of the interest of the women of Montgomery County in the kind of government they are going to live under and do business under in the next few years."

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, made public a letter this morning in which he wrote Gov. Alf M. Landon that his record as Governor is "a matter of deep concern to the workers."

He charged there was lack of protection of health and safety in the lead and zinc area and that living conditions were "outrageously low."

He said "the entire situation is a blot" upon Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, adding that "certainly, Kansas has done nothing to set a standard of hope and confidence for the workers."

He expressed hope the Republican nominee would give his views on the efforts to organize sharecroppers and steel workers and discuss the Wagner labor relations law from the standpoint of desirability.

Mother Hubbard's Dog Brings Tears To Emilie Dionne

By the United Press.

Callander, Ontario, Aug. 4.—Dr. Allan R. Dafoe tells it—and it is the story of how Emilie Dionne, of the Dionne quintuplets, intervened in the tragic case of old Mother Hubbard who went to the cupboard to get her poor dog a bone.

You will recall that when she got there the cupboard was bare, but that news only reached the Dionne quintuplets last night when their nurse was reading the rhyme to them. Four of them took old Mother Hubbard's tragedy calmly, but Emilie wept about it. Tears were still on her cheeks when she fell asleep.

Picking up a slice of bacon, Emilie laid it on the picture directly under the dog's nose.

Then she ate her breakfast.

When Dr. Dafoe arrived later in the day Emilie showed him the dog's picture. The bacon had been removed, but a grease spot remained.

'Secret Trade' Pacts Assailed By G.O.P. Chief

Hamilton Says Cattlemen and Farmers Are Major Complainants.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 4.—John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, told a Colorado audience tonight that farmers are cattlemen have been the chief complainants against the Roosevelt Administration's reciprocal trade agreements.

Taking note of Secretary of State Hull's reported designation of opponents of the agreements as "a wrecking crew of agriculture," Hamilton said, in an address, the "chief critics (of the Administration trade agreements) have been the farmers and cattlemen who know that under Mr. Hull's arrangements the United States has not won a treaty yet."

Hamilton added:

"I do not have to remind the cattlemen of the drop in the price of steers that followed the agreement when Canadian cattle started coming over the border in double the usual numbers."

"If we note the Canadian agreement as our stockmen have, we find the concessions of importations apply only to cattle of over 700 pounds. * * *

"The cattleman is grateful for the protection but he is inclined to recall that we have a neighbor nation on our southern border which the Secretary of State has not yet reached on his list.

"That nation is well known for the large number of smaller type cattle which it raises.

"Can it be that the little group in the State Department disposing of the interests of our people in such irresponsible fashion plans to care for our competitors on the northern border with respect to cattle over 700 pounds and our competitors on the southern border with respect to those under 700 pounds? Who can tell? The State Department now works in secret. * * *"

The Republican Party, he added, insists that methods used for expanding foreign trade "shall at all times be compatible with the American system of giving open hearing and thereby fair consideration to the interests of all parties concerned."

G. O. P. Names Hutcheson Aid Of Labor Unit

Union Chief Says Landon's Government Stand Merits Support.

William Hutcheson, of Indianapolis, president of the Interantional Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, was appointed director of the Republican National Committee's labor division yesterday.

Leaving a meeting of the executive council of the American Fedeartion of Labor, which is "trying" the recalcitrant C. I. O. unions, Hutcheson issued a statement completely indorsing the labor stand of Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee.

Landon's expression on labor has been the target of John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., but no comment has come from federation officials.

Cites Reasons.

"I am for Gov. Landon for President because of his concept of the principles of Government as set forth in the Constitution of the United States," Hutcheson said.

"America should be for Americans. We have no class distinction and should have no class legislation.

"No person or group of persons should want or desire legislation enacted for their special benefit.

"Workers should be permitted to join an organization of their own choosing without interference from anyone and given an opportunity to enter into contractual relations with their employers through representatives of their own selection."

Active Republican.

Hutcheson has been an active Republican for many years and headed the party's labor committee in 1932. He will open his office in Republican headquarters in Chicago Friday.

The head of the carpenters' union is a bitter opponent of Lewis. In the federation's Atlantic City convention last fall he and Lewis exchanged blows on the floor of the convention. He has been active in the move to oust Lewis from the federation.

With Hutcheson's appointment to the Republican post indications that labor, already split along organization lines, may also split along political lines became stronger.

Armistead Inquest Will Be Held Today

A coroner's jury today will investigate the death of Col. Carroll F. Armistead, 64-year-old patient of St. Elizabeths Hospital, who died at the institution Monday night after he was reported to have ben struck by a 22-year-old sailor.

Armistead, a veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, was said to have brushed against George W. Stephens while they were passing from one ward to another.

Stephens, who doctors say is suffering from "interference delusions," struck the colonel, who fell to the floor, striking his head on the cement.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered the inquest, set for 11:30 a. m., when an autopsy showed Armistead died from the effects of a cerbral hemorrhage.

among them Virginia, Missouri, Michigan and New Mexico.

Projects immediately started flowing in from the States deleted, and the PWA has asked the WPA to made a recheck. Senator Bennett Champ Clark called on Ickes Monday to complain about Missouri failing to receive PWA allotments.

A letter of protest was written to the President by Representative Beiter, who pointed out that there could be no further PWA relief provided in the Buffalo area if the 100 per cent relief labor requirement was enforced.

Beiter, who led the Congressional drive for PWA earmarkings last session, complained that the limitation was being insisted upon in PWA, even though WPA did not employ 100 per cent relief labor.

Rule Enforced Rigidly.

Ickes, who previously had said there would be no hard and fast rule in using relief labor, except for filling the maximum jobs from relief rolls, admitted yesterday that the rule was being rigidly adhered to. He said he had held no recent conference with the President, but printed reports indicated he intended to enforce the requirement. He said it was "problematical" whether PWA could use all of the $300,000,000 unless the rule was relaxed.

Asked if the relief labor requirement placed a "premium" on relief rolls, and operated to encourage towns to establish relief rolls where they now had none, Ickes smiled and said:

"Some towns are very enterprising."

A reporter asked Ickes flatly if he would like to see the requirement discontinued.

"I would like to go ahead with more projects—yes," Ickes replied. "It is entirely up to the President."

From Hyde Park came no indication that the President would change his mind. Observing on his trip through New England that 35 per cent of employes in PWA projects in New Hampshire were relief workers, and 51 per cent in Vermont, he said at that time he intended to be more hard-boiled in enforcing the rule. The Administration has been represented as wishing to stretch the funds where possible and hold some of the $1,425,000,000 in reserve to meet emergencies.

The Public Works administrator announced that a list of allotments under the new flood control program would be ready for submission to the President today but the projects would not immediately be made public.

Bids were opened yesterday for construction of superstructures of Ten Eyck houses, PWA's $12,153,000 slum clearance project in New York, Starret Bros. & Eken bid $7,610,000 and Wallin Concrete Corporation, combined with Necaro Co., Inc., bid $8,522,913. This is the largest project in PWA's national slum clearance program, which includes 50 projects in 35 cities.

Road Repair Plans Made in Allegany

Baltimore, Aug. 4 (AP).—Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the State roads commission, today said plans were being made for a number of road improvements in Allegany County in anticipation of the receipt of Federal funds.

The projects include widening the bridge and straightening a curve on the national highway at Braddock Run; and widening the small bridge on the national highway near the Six Mile House. Widening of a curve in the pike near the Shrine Country Club is already under contfor this work, but Federal highway tract, Dr. Stabler said.

The money is not now available funds are expected after the next session of Congress. With the plans already made, the improvements can be made as soon as the money is turned over to the State.

Thomas D. Schall Will Names Wife Executrix

Brother Menaced Her at Reading Of Will, She Says

Charged with threatening his sister with a pistol during the reading of his father's will a few hours after the burial, Jacob Jacobson, jr., of Alta Vista, Md., was released by the Montgomery County police in Bethesda on $500 bail yesterday.

According to officials, the body of Jacobson, former District policeman, had been lowered into the grave in Arlington National Cemetery, and the family had gone to the home at Alta Vista to hear from attorneys how the property was to be disposed of.

As members of the family sat in the living room and the will was read, Jacobson drew a gun and threatened his sister, Mrs. Irene Powzee, of Alta Vista, she charged. She obtained the warrant for his arrest. He will be arraigned August 21.

Clouds Obliterate Peltier's Comet, But Offset Heat

The clouds that brought relief to a hot and muggy Washington last night cut off what was to have been the best view of Peltier's Comet. The celestial vagabond reached its brighest last night and then began to fade.

Astronomers at the Naval Observatory were prepared to train their telescopes on the comet, but one look at the sky was enough to tell them that the show was off.

The average Washingonian appeared to be little disturbed by this. Not even the information that it would be from 300 to 1,500 years before Peltier's Comet paid a return visit seemed to spoil his anticipation of rain and an end of the hot spell.

A. F. L. to Give Verdict Today On Insurgents

Ruling of Guilty Expected Against Unions Accused of Rebellion.

By Felix Bruner.

Action to be taken by the American Federation of Labor in the long controversy over the activities of the committee for industrial organization will be announced today, William Green, Federation president, said last night.

Every indication pointed to a verdict of "guilty" against the 12 unions, with membership of more than 1,000,000, comprising about a third of the Federation. The executive council of the Federation had yet to determine the nature of the punishment.

The unions involved are those which have joined with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, in setting up an alleged "dual" organization within the Federation. Their activities have caused the most serious breach in the ranks of labor since the Federation was organized 50 years ago.

Punishments Listed.

Punishments to be meted out by the executive council may include any one of the following:

Individual or collective suspension for an indefinite period.

Suspension for a limited period.

Suspension of rights and privileges for a definite or an indefinite period.

A fine, the amount to be determined by the executive council.

An order that the activities of the C. I. O. must be discontinued.

Four specific charges have been made against the unions and, according to Green, the council has "accepted the record as it was made" by those bringing the charges. The charges are:

That the C. I. O. is a dual organization competing with the A. F. of L.

That the C. I. O. has been fomenting insurrection within the federation.

That the C. I. O. unions have been guilty of a breach of contract with the A. F. of L.

That the C. I. O. unions have violated the decisions of the A. F. of L. convention, constituting rebellion against policies adopted by a majority vote.

Dual Operation Feared.

Any action of the council which would remove the recalcitrant unions from the federation for a long period of time would be far-reaching in its implications. The result would be a continued dual operation in the field of organized labor and would make a united labor front almost impossible.

In addition, the federation would lose an income of $10,000 a month in dues from members of these unions. In this connection, Green said:

"The federation can get along whatever its income. We don't thinks of dues when a principle is at stake."

Green made it clear that none of the proposed penalties would mean expulsion of the unions. He said that if they were expelled the action would leave the way open to form new unions in the fields now occupied by the C. I. O. members, and that this was not planned.

Indications that a last-minute attempt might be made to bring about a compromise or to soften the punishment appeared when Edward J. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, kept a dinner engagement immediately after adjournment of the council with Daniel J. Tobin, president of the Teamsters' Union and a member of the council. Tobin has been advising a compromise. Green, however, said there was no hope of a compromise.

Meanwhile, none of the union officials against whom charges have been filed have appeared at the "trial." Lewis returned to Washington from a trip to Pennsylvania, but would not comment.

The closing argument to the council was made by John P. Frey, head of the federation's metal trades division. Immediately after his argument the council, with 14 members present, constituted itself a "jury" to bring in a verdict.

Brands Lewis a "Mussolini."

Frey charged that under the announced plans of the Lewis group it could reach out and cover the whole field of labor. Its activities thus far have been confined to mass-production industries, Frey referred to Lewis as a "Mussolini" and to Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union and secretary of the C. I. O., as a "Machiavelli."

"One, Mussolini, the unscrupulous and arrogant dictator, of whom it has been said, he suffers at times from a rush of blood to the head, an extravagant rage, a surge of destructive willfulness," Frey said. "Like a volcano, he spouts flame and burning lava, spreading poisonous gases over the countryside.

"The other is Machiavelli, who taught rulers and kings the cunning and deceptive arts of diplomacy, the method by which words and phrases could be used so that the purpose of those using them could be concealed, and who made deception, double-dealing, treachery and misleading opponents to get rid of them a virtue among those who were rulers or considered themselves to be diplomats."

Hospital Baby Mix-up of 17 Years Ago Is Settled

Top photos show principals in Atlanta's hospital baby mix-up of 17 years ago, settled yesterday, when Louise Madeline, claimed by two families, decided under a court ruling the John C. Garners are her parents, not the Daniel L. Pittmans, with whom she has lived all her life. Upper left is Mrs. Pittman with Louise Madeline, and upper right, Mrs. Garner with Mary Elizabeth, who died when less than a year old. Photos were made at time of litigation. Took Coughlin To Task, Detroit Bishop Admits

Gallagher, in Rome, Says He Voiced Objections to Priest's Talks.

By the United Press.

Vatican City, Aug. 4.—Breaking a one week's silence, Bishop Michael J. Gallagher, of Detroit, today admitted for the first time since he came to Italy that already he had disciplined Father Charles E. Coughlin, the radio priest.

Earlier, persons close to Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, said the Holy See advised Bishop Gallagher to urge Father Coughlin, anti-New Deal campaigner, to confine his speeches so far as possible to religious subjects, avoiding political controversies embarrassing to the church.

Bishop Gallagher today was confronted with persistent reports that the Vatican requested him to tone down Father Coughlin's speeches.

"I took care of all that before I left the United States," Bishop Gallagher said. "I told Father Coughlin I did not approve of his calling people liars, etc. As a result and as is known, Father Coughlin apologized to President Roosevelt.

"That is all past history. I can not see why we should do any more."

Bishop Gallagher, however, did not confirm that the Vatican asked him to tell Father Coughlin to confine his speeches to religious subjects. He remained unshaken in his previous statements that the Vatican in no way intervened in the case, but it was believed that his statement regarding his remonstrations with Father Coughlin was also his response to Vatican questions as to what was being done to soften the fiery character of Father Coughlin's speeches.

A Vatican source said:

"The Church is not too satisfied with Father Coughlin's political activities. It does not like its priests to become too deeply involved in politics."

Coughlin "Assents."

Royal Oak, Mich., Aug. 4 (U.P.).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin tonight said, through a spokesman, that he was in agreement with any statement concerning him made by his superior, Bishop Michael J. Gallagher, at Rome.

Girl in Baby Mixup Repudiates 'Parents' for Other Claimants

By the Associated Press.

Macon, Ga., Aug. 4.—A dark-haired, brown-eyed girl, claimed by two families in a baby mix-up 17 years ago today left the one which reared her in favor of the other which she hadn't seen until a week ago.

In making the decision, the attractive girl raised by the Daniel L. Pittmans, of Atlanta, as Louise Madeline Pittman, exercised her court-granted privilege and decided she was the daughter of the John C. Garners, of Macon.

It was in 1919 that Mrs. Garner and Mrs. Pittman gave birth to daughters at Grady Hospital, city-operated institution in Atlanta. Mrs. Garner's baby was born May 22, Mrs. Pittman's May 23.

Dispute Raged for Months.

Both mothers claimed they were given the wrong baby, but that error was believed corrected to the satisfaction of all concerned. When they left the hospital, the Garners said, however, the baby given them was not theirs.

Months passed and the dispute raged. Then it was decided to let the hospital superintendent decide the parentage. Before his decision came, the baby the Garners named Mary Elizabeth died.

Subsequently, the Garners went to court in an effort to obtain custody of Louise Madeline.

Judge George L. Bell ruled in 1920 the child would remain with the Pittmans "until of an age to make a voluntary choice of her own deciding."

Resemblance Noted.

Last week Louise Madeline came to visit the Garners, who moved to Macon two years ago from Atlanta. Neighbors said they noted a strong resemblance between the Garners' three other girls as they stood together.

"I love the Pittmans, of course," said Louise Madeline. "They were good to me, but somehow I haven't felt they were my parents. I do feel the Garners are, and that these are my sisters.

"I don't want to hurt them (the Pittmans); in fact, I can't bear to tell them, myself. I'd rather they would see it in the papers."

The beaming Garners had a word to say.

"Her name from now on is going to be Mary Louise Garner," said the head of the house, who is a veteran locomotive engineer. "The baby which was given to us was called Mary Elizabeth, and since this girl is used to being called Louise, we are going to combine the names."

Mrs. Garner said she never doubted the child was hers.

In Atlanta, gray-haired Mrs. Pittman, mother of two other children, was just as confident the girl is her child.

"God is my guide," she said. "I know Louise Madeline is my baby, and I have all the faith in the world that she will return to me."

German Vessel Is Fired Upon By Leftist Ship

Leaves Undamaged After Attack; Reich Officers Talk With Rebels.

rama Mountain stronghold defending Madrid.

Gen. Riquelme, who led the offensive along the entire front in what many believe may be the decisive thrust in Spain's bloody civil war, was backed with an army of workers.

A division under Gen. Mangada, after recapturing San Rafael in an artillery and infantry action which was reported to have left the little township little more than a pile of debris, succeeded in isolating the rebel garrison holding Alto de Leon.

Rebels were unaware of his approach on the northern fringe of the mountain range and stormed down the Madrid side of the pass to raid Gen. Riquelme's headquarters in the town of Guadarrama.

Bullets from rebel guns were said actually to have penetrated Gen. Riquelme's cottage headquarters. While the general was taking coffee a bullet smashed the cup.

Their attack repulsed, the rebels withdrew to find Gen. Mangada had cut off their retreat.

Loyalists Confident.

Combined Loyalist forces were confident of annihilating the rebels in an enclosing operation which raged on the mountainside.

Burning woods set aflame by shellfire hampered movements of both sides.

While the critical engagement was fought in the Guadarramas, throughout most of Spain thousands of troops were marching against each other.

There was conflict in the Balearic Islands and in the Spanish Moroccan cities where the revolt started 18 days ago.

Loyalists forced the fighting in the Guadarramas outside Madrid, and nearly 400 were listed dead.

Madrid and a military directorate were the rebels' goals. Rebel defeat everywhere was the Loyalist objective. Wherever opposing forces met, vicious battle ensued.

Two German warships appeared in Ceuta, Morocco, held by rebels, and rebel allegatons that foreign planes were being used by Loyalists added grave international problems.

(Officers of the warships were reported to have been received by Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the rebellion. The German vessels were greeted with siren blasts and cannon salutes. The reported conference was said to have aroused great enthusiasm in the Spanish rebel zone.)

No accurate estimate of the death toll in the war were available. Reports from both sides, however, indicated it was high. Accounts of battles during the 18 days have recounted fatalities that might aggregate 25,000.

New Fight for Madrid.

Today's developments:

Central Spain:

Vicious fighting marked the new struggle for Madrid in the Guadarrama passes. Three hundred rebels were killed and 84 Loyalists died in a preliminary encounter. Heavy artillery firing marked continuation of the fight.

Casualties mounted heavily as the government hurled 80,000 troops against the encircling insurgents from three directions in the Guadarrama sector.

Railway communication was reestablished with Badajoz. Steps were taken to conserve huge supplies of gasoline stored at Valencia. Four University professors were dismissed for Fascist sympathies.

Rebels still held the Alcazar barracks at Toledo. The government withheld attack, apparently awaiting a food shortage to force surrender.

The northern front:

Four Loyalist columns converged on Zaragoza, held by rebels. Occupation of Sastago was claimed, and Catalan troops said they seized the power plant supplying the Zaragoza region with electricity.

Bombardment of the rebel city was ordered.

Rebels rushed new units toward Loyalist San Sebastian and predicted its surrender soon because of disorganization among the defenders.

Five hundred volunteer workers from Barcelona were sent across the Mediterranean to move on Palma, capital of Mallorca in the Balearic Islands.

A rebel cruiser ceased bombardment of Gijon when the city threatened execution of political prisoners as reprisal.

The southern sector:

Loyalists sought new recruits for a siege of Seville, southern Fascist headquarters—the new recruits to enlist for two months in a military force.

Rebels ferried reinforcements from Spanish Morocco to aid the Seville army in the march north toward Madrid.

Two rebel planes were shot down in a battle over the Straits of Gibraltar.

Loyalists halted bombardment of Ceuta, Morocco, when two German warships appeared in the harbor. Their officers were reported to have called at Gen. Francisco Franco's rebel headquarters there.

French Planes

ernment has sought arms from France, also called on Delbos.

Seizure of four French commercial planes by the Madrid government further complicated the international picture.

Pierre Cot, air minister, admitted to the chamber of deputies that the planes had been requisitioned; but after, he added, they had made several trips to and from Spain with French refugees.

An investigation would be made, Minister Cot Said.

Both the rebel and government forces, he explained, had taken over private commercial planes of several foreign powers. He denied direct delivery by the French Socialist regime of any ships to the Madrid government.

Berlin, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Nazi government tonight declined either to confirm or to deny the reported visit of German naval officers to the Spanish rebel headquarters of Gen. Francisco Franco in Ceuta, Morocco.

Italy Awaits Reports.

Rome, Aug. 4 (AP).—Italy is awaiting full reports on developments in Spain's civil war, authoritative sources said tonight, before committing herself to France's proposed neutrality pact.

4 Railways Seized.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Madrid, Aug. 4.—Fighting the tightening ring of men and steel drawn by insurgent forces about Madrid, the government today seized four railways and put down a revolt in Valencia, its major outlet to the sea.

Following seizure of industry, motor transport and convents, an official decree authorized the state to seize provisionally the Northern Railway, the Madrid-Zaragoza-Alicante Line, the Aragon Central Railway and the Western Railway.

Earlier it had warned that such provisional seizures would become permanent at the end of the civil war.

Britain Shares Fear.

London, Aug. 4 (AP).—Britain's foreign office tonight "fully shared" the French fear of a general European war should other powers throw their might to either rebellious Fascists or the Popular Frant government in Spain.

In some British diplomatic quarters it was said Premier Mussolini might seek concessions from England, Fracne, Belgium and Germany in the proposed five-power Locarno conference in October in return for his word that Italy would not lend aid in the Spanish crisis.

Janney Awarded Divorce at Reno

Reno, Nev., Aug. 4 (AP).—Leon Janney, 19-year-old stage and screen actor, won an uncontested divorce decree here today from his pretty showgirl bride of four months, Jessica Pepper. District Judge Thomas F. Moran granted the decree on grounds of cruelty.

World Crisis

had armed the workers and peasants. It is clear they would not permit themselves to be disarmed without getting those revolutionary reforms they demanded.

A victory of the government, therefore, would mean that, in Trotzky's phrase, Europe would be red at both ends. At the western end of the Mediterranean there would be in power a regime intensely anti-Fascist. Italy, whose interest in the Mediterranean has increased greatly since the beginning of its campaign in Ethiopia, could hardly view such a development with equanimity. Nor could it, nor could Nazi Germany, calmly view a victory of Left elements against Fascists.

Europe is a very small place. Ideas travel rapidly. A victory of the Spanish Popular Front would in a very real sense undermine the stability of all Fascist governments, strengthen the hand of the Left elements everywhere. No wonder, then, that Italy and Germany have viewed with sympathy the efforts of the Spanish rebels to overthrow the Madrid regime and have shown that sympathy in very material fashion. No one knows what proportion of the arms used by the rebels are of foreign origin; it may be large and present supplies are plainly being supplemented by shipments from Italy and elsewhere.

Opportunity for Selves.

But the Italian and the German sympathy for the Spanish rebels does not etnirely rest on the similarity between the viewpoint of the insurgents and their own viewpoints. They both see in the victory of the Fascists in Spain an opportunity to advance their own interests. Such a victory would mean the isolation of France on three sides by Fascist nations. It also might lead to concessions by Fascist Spain, particularly if the leaders would owe their victory to the support given them by Fascist Italy or Nazi Germany or both. Such concessions might take the form of permission to establish air bases in the Balearic Islands or the Canary Islands.

And it also might mean the cession of Spanish Morocco, long the graveyard of Spanish military reputations and a constant drain on the Spanish exchequer, to one or the other of these powers. The presence at Ceuta of German warships must, therefore, be regarded as more than a mere coincidence. And the shelling of a German freighter by a Spanish gunboat may, if not now, sooner or later, provide the occasion for the seizure of the last Spanish colony.

But Italy and Germany are not the only ones with interests in the Spanish developments. There is France. There is Russia. There is Great Britain.

Similar Coalition.

In France, the Blum government is supported by a coalition very similar in nature to that which governs in Spain. A victory of the Spanish Fascists unquestionably would rouse to action the Croix de Feu and other reactionary organizations which, while quiet, are not moribund. There is a very real temptation, therefore, for France to aid the Spanish government. But it would prefer to let the Spanish civil war burn itself out. Eager above all else to see peace preserved, it fears the inevitable consequence of intervention by European powers in the Spanish mess. It has, therefore, appealed to Great Britain and Italy to agree on a joint policy of neutrality and non-intervention.

Great Britain has now replied in the affirmative. Great Britain wants no upset in the Mediterranean balance of power. It does not want either Germany nor Italy established too close to Gibraltar. But in this matter as in so many other questions of international politics, the British policy is one of hesitation and indecision. And the enormous prestige it once enjoyed in the councils of Europe has sadly declined because of its failure in the Ethiopian crisis.

France now awaits the Italian reply. But in the meantime it has sent to southern France, as a sign that it means business, six planes which at a moment's notice will be rushed to Madrid to aid the Spanish government in its fight for life. And if France aids Spain, so will Russia. Already money is being raised among Russian workers for the aid of the Leftist regime at Madrid.

Thus the Spanish uprising which originally concerned Spain alone is now of vital concern to at least five other nations. In their hands rests the fate not only of Spain, but also of Europe.

U. S. Communists Asked To Aid Spain's Leftists

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Communist Party headquarters issued a statement today quoting Earl Browder, its Presidential candidate, in an appeal for "full moral and financial support" of the Spanish government's "fight against reaction and fascism."

Alabama Miners End Wage Strike

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 4 (U.P.).—The 2-month-old ore strike of 2,200 Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. miners ended today, Gov. Bibb Graves announced tonight.

Under the Graves compromise, the "incentive wage plan" of the company, which precipitated the strike, will be given a four-month trial. The workers walked out of the pits when this plan went into effect, terming it a "stretch out."

84 Indictments Name Largest U. S. Oil Firms

Detroit Official Accused in Milk Conspiracy; Was Member of Order.

Indictments charging violation of the antitrust laws, returned in Madison, Wis. named as defendants some of the largest oil companies in America the Department of Justice revealed here yesterday. The indictments, which cited 23 companies and 61 individuals, were described as the most extensive antitrust prosecutions undertaken by the New Deal.

Included in the list of defendants were such companies as the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, Socony Vacuum, Cities Service, Continental, Gulf, Pure Oil, Texas, Tide Water, Mid-Continent, Phillips, Skelly, Shell, Sinclair and Barnsdall. Included also were two publications, the Chicago Journal of Commerce and Oilgram, published in Cleveland.

The charges generally were that the defendant companies, publications and individuals were engaged in price fixing on a wholesale scale. They result from a long Federal investigation ordered by the Justice Department following the breakdown of Government attempts to regulate the oil business.

From Madison, the Associated Press reported that the work of serving warrants against the 84 defendants was going on, but it was indicated that it will be several months before the case can be brought to trial.

Among the first warrants issued were for the arrest of prominent Chicagoans, including Henry Seubert, president of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana; Henry M. Dawes, president of the Pure Oil Co.; Keith Fanshier, petroleum editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, and Bryan S. Reid, Chicago executive of the Socony-Vacuum Co. Bonds for each of the 61 individuals were fixed at $5,000.

The single indictment, in which all of the defendants are named, was based on the Federal grand jury's finding that the major oil companies operated pools in Texas, Oklahoma, and mid-continent fields to purchase gasoline from independent refineries at artificial prices which were maintained as open market quotations.

It charged price raising and price fixing was achieved by selling gasoline to independent jobbers on long term supply contracts at a cost determined by prices published in trade journals, which were the prices allegedly fixed in the buying pools. Independent jobbers complained to the Government that these prices were too high to maintain competition.

A complete list of defendants follows:

First Refugees Reach Boston; Tell of Horror

New Yorker Says He and 4 Others Escaped Death by Firing Squad.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 4.—The first American refugees to arrive here from the raging civil strife in Spain told tales of horror and bloodshed tonight.

Burned churches, sudden airplane attacks, fear of death and roaming bands of young men and women all heavily armed were part of the descriptions related by Americans, mostly women, arriving on board the S. S. Exeter.

A New York portrait painter, Donald Newhall, told how he, his wife and two other New Yorkers were lined up at a roadside in Minorca by Spanish soldiers who leveled their rifles at them.

Only the intervention of a Spanish woman, who shouted "They're English," saved them, Newhall said. Later a top sergeant guarded them.

Five New Yorkers.

Oliver Allen, of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Sam Wagstaff, of New York City, were with the Newhalls, the painter said.

Newhall said he believed the soldiers mistook his party for fleeing royalists or escaping army officers.

Ana Louisa de Davila, wife of the Mayor of Jayaya, Puerto Rico, told a story of living several days in a Barcelona hotel where guests prepared their own food, washed dishes and "kept house" because the servants joined the ranks of fighters.

Katrine Charnley, 21, of Cleveland, a Wells College (New York) graduate, described street fighting in Barcelona and the ransacking of a girls' orphanage there. Girls of about 12 to 13 years of age, she said, were led from the orphanage. "What happened to them I don't known, but the union leaders made headquarters out of the building.

8 Slain, 20 Wounded.

"I saw government troops and guardia (Barcelona police), clash in front of the house where I stayed with my aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip E. West. Eight men were shot dead and 20 wounded in the skirmish."

One woman, Miss Dixie Scoville, of New York City, left behind her sweetheart a Fascist fighter, she said. She hopes to return some day to Palma de Mallorca, where she had resided for five years, and marry him, she said.

Most of the American men attached to business firms and governmental duties in Spain remained at their posts, the refugees said, but sent their wives and children either to the United States or to Marseille, France, where the Exeter transported 162 Americans from Barcelona.

Miss Charnley said only one American woman she knew of, a Belgian by birth, remained in Barcelona. That woman, she explained, stayed because her daughter was sick.

Scenes of Rioting.

Another American woman, Elizabeth Healey, secretary of the Cooperative School for student teachers, described scenes of rioting and burning in Malaga which she saw from an ancient Spanish fort situated on a hill a few miles away.

Miss Healey, who was taken aboard a British freighter and transferred to the British destroyer Brazen, boarded the Exeter at Gibraltar.

From her came the story of 120 rebels dying in two days at Malaga. She said she heard reports that their fingers had been cut off and the rebels then had been clubbed to death.

She spent ten days at the fortress before she could leave.

At Gibraltar, she related, there was no space for refugees and members of the crew of the British destroyer shared their rations with the passengers. Miss Healey asserted the dock yards at Gibraltar were opened for the first time in history to the public and refugees fed and given a place to sleep there.

Secret Inquiry InGrain Buying Begun by U. S.

Study Begun After Report; Farmers Fear Speculation Will Boost Price.

By the Associated Press.

A secret study of means to circumvent any "undue speculation" in supplies of feed grains and forags was started yesterday by Government drought relief authorities.

Sources close to the Agricultural Department's drought committee said officials turned their attention chiefly to the possibility of making feed loans to farmers through the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Gov. Clyde L. Herring, of Iowa, they said, had called the attention of Federal authorities to increasing fear among farmers that heavy purchases of feed stocks by the private trade meant higher prices during the winter season. Coincidentally, large commercial purchases of wheat feeds and concentrates were reported at Buffalo.

More Cattle Purchases.

Other developments on the drought relief front yesterday included authorization for the purchase of an additional 2,110 head of cattle and 225 calves from the drought area, plan for Government purchase of grain crop seed, and the addition of 30 counties in five States to the list of officially designated drought territory.

Texas entered the list for the first time with 12 counties designated for emergency assistance. Eighteen other counties were added in Georgia, Minnesota, Nebraska and Wyoming.

Officials privately said they approached the commercial feed situation with considerable trepidation, being anxious lest the Government be charged with "taking over the feed business."

Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of the drought committee, minimized the possibility of special machinery being set up to make feed loans to farmers. It was his personal opinion, he said, that demands could be met by the Farm Credit Administration.

Encourage Suggestion.

In usually well-informed quarters it was said officials had encouraged the suggestion of Gov. Herring that individual States utilize public funds in taking options on feed supplies for resale on a cost-plus basis to farmers.

Plans for Government purchase of seed grain were reported to be taking form along lines followed during the 1934 drought. The Commodity Credit Corporation was expected to borrow approximately $10,000,000 from the Reconstruction Corporation for the purchase of about 8,000,000 bushels of spring wheat, durham wheat, oats, flax and barley, to be resold to farmers for cash on the basis of purchase price plus carrying charges.

Drought Relief Spurns Politics, Roosevelt Says

President Meets Officials to Discuss Finances, Plans Tours.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 4.—President Roosevelt coupled a further study of drought conditions with a discussion of Federal finances today, then emphasized at his press conference that politics was divorced from drought relief.

He relaxed the rule that he must not be quoted directly on what he says at press conferences to authorize a statement that:

"It is a great disservice to the proper administration of any government to link up human misery with partisan politics."

Around him in the library of his home he gathered this morning another array of Washington officials for what he said was the usual monthly conference on finances. The drought, he said, figured in the talk.

The drought, the President said, still is serious. It has required use of relief funds in some States in excess of allocations, he said, but, because of a pickup in employment, allocations in some other States have not been as large as had been contemplated.

After asserting that a prospective trip through drought-blighted States would have no political aspects, the President said he probably would not know until late this week when the tour would be made or whether it would precede another tour through floodswept Eastern States.

Secretary Morgenthau was present at the morning parley. So were Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture and Resettlement administrator, who has been active in Administration plans to battle the drought; Daniel Bell, acting Budget director; Aubrey Williams, deputy, and Corrington Gill, assistant WPA administrator, also concerned with drought relief, and other officials and accountants of the Treasury.

Mr. Seal's Appointment.

The District Commissioners are to be congratulated for their good judgment—however dilatory—in selecting Elwood Seal to fill the office of corporation counsel.

Mr. Seal has served five years in the corporation counsel's office, most recently as assistant to E. Barrett Prettyman, who resigned in March. This fact doubtless aided his appointment, for during Mr. Prettyman's term, particularly, the corporation counsel's office was applauded on every hand for its full measure of community service. Mr. Seal's work when drafted by a Senate sub-committee investigating the sale and distribution of dairy products in Washington first marked him as a prosecutor of outstanding ability, a distinction that was further bolstered as he became legal adviser for the insurance and health departments and the unemployment insurance board. Lately, his work in defending the District in its major damage suits confirmed his right to the reputation.

That the Commissioners were able to rise above the many political influences surrounding the appointment augurs well for the future of municipal affairs as far, at least, as the choice of personnel is concerned. The precedent of choosing competent local residents for all posts which can thus be appropriately filled is becoming more and more firmly established.

Not A Prosperity Index.

The rise in the volume of bank deposits since the summer of 1933 is frequently cited as an indication that the country is making rapid strides toward recovery. As a matter of fact, however, the swollen condition of our bank deposits is the most disturbing feature of a generally encouraging business outlook. Instead of being a sign of returning prosperity and of increased strength on the part of the banks, the growth of deposits has been an accompaniment of deficit financing which has seriously weakened the banking structure and laid the foundation for a dangerous type of credit inflation.

Proof of this assertion is easily obtained by a brief analysis of the statistical evidence. At the end of last March, for instance, deposits in all banks stood at the extraordinarily high figure of $48,771,000,000—less than $6,000,000,000 below the level of March, 1929, $10,000,000,000 higher than in the period immediately following the banking moratorium, and over $4,000,000,000 above the total reported for March, 1935.

However, during this period some very significant changes have occurred in the character of bank assets. In the spring of 1929 bank loans amounted to $40,557,000,000; this spring they were just half as large and showed a slight decline as compared with a year ago. Meantime, investment holdings had risen from $17,462,000,000 in March, 1929, to $25,882,000,000, in March, 1936. In other words, loans which equaled approximately 75 per cent of deposits in 1929 had shrunk to only 41 per cent of deposits in 1936.

Although deposits are constantly being shifted from one institution to another, the banking system as a whole shows increases in deposits whenever loans increase, and reductions when loans are repaid or deposits drawn out as currency. Since deposits grow out of loans, it is very important, therefore, to trace the origin of the loan expansion upon which the present rise in deposits is based. It is true that there has been a general downward trend of short-term commercial banking loans in evidence for many years, reflected in an upward trend of long-term loans represented by investment holdings. However, the reasons for this trend offer no adequate explanation of the really startling changes in bank portfolios that have occurred since the Roosevelt Administration came into office.

The investment holdings of the banks, for example, have risen 38 per cent since the end of 1932, while loans have dropped 22 per cent during the same period from an already low depression level. As the rise in investments is due chiefly to bank purchases of Government securities, it is plain that the great growth of deposits has been brought about by Government borrowing to cover huge deficits. In the words of one critic, the new deposits "have nothing whatever to do with wealth, but are merely the results of printing vast quantities of crisp Government bonds and writing their 'values' in figures in bank ledgers."

There is only one way to put a stop to a continuous expansion of deposits created by the Government's practice of borrowing from the banks and placing excessive issues of Federal securities in their possession. It is essential to reduce the scale of Federal expenditure to amounts that can be covered by current revenues. Or at least the deficit should be cut until it can be financed from the people's earnings, pending attainment of a balanced budget.

Under the present plan, as Dr. E. W. Kemmerer points out in a recent article, "the Government creates by the sale of its notes and bonds to the banks the very credit which it uses, getting the money by a method that does not at the same time take it away from the other fellow." This policy, he explains, spells inflation, since it means that the deposit currency which constitutes our chief medium of exchange is being increased faster than the physical volume of business to be done.

Mussolini's Responsibility.

The action of the British government in adding its powerful voice to that of France in favor of neutrality and nonintervention in the Spanish situation is an exceedingly welcome development.

Of extreme seriousness in itself as an indication of the sorry pass to which a nation might be brought by class warfare, the present chaos in Spain has from the first borne within itself disturbing international possibilities. Whichever side may win, this civil war is likely to intensify the struggle now going on in many parts of Europe between Fascist and proletarian elements. But at least precautionary measures on the part of the major European powers should serve to prevent that struggle from developing into an international conflict.

Great Britain's action has come none too soon. More and more the major powers have begun to identify their own interests with either the rebels or the Madrid government. And as the civil war has pursued its violent but inconclusive course the temptation has grown to fish in the troubled Spanish waters.

It is clear that not all of the powers have been as meticulous as France in refraining from supplying arms, ammunition and implements of war to the combatants. Without the outside assistance it has obviously received from Italy and possibly from other countries as well, it is doubtful whether the Spanish rebellion could have made the progress it has. But the very circumstance that the rebels have been aided by sympathizers, whether private or governmental, was bound to have the effect of encouraging governments in which Left elements are strong to intervene on the side of the Madrid regime.

There can be no question that the pressure on Premier Blum and his colleagues to lift the embargo on arms to the Spanish loyalists has grown enormously since it was revealed that Italian planes loaded with ammunition were being sent to Spanish rebel centers in Morocco. But the French government has sought desperately to avoid taking such a step which, within France itself, would intensify the cleavage between Right and Left. As an alternative it has proposed a three-power agreement signed by itself, Great Britain and Italy, to refrain in any way from aiding either the rebels or the government in Spain.

It is clear that other powers must also join in the enforcement of such a pledge if it is to have the intended effect. Whether they will do so remains to be seen. Germany's sympathy for the rebels has not been disguised; in Russia popular sympathies are obviously with the Leftists and already money is being raised to aid the Madrid regime in its fight against Fascism. But these nations will perforce fall in line if France, Great Britain and Italy reach an agreement.

An enormous responsibility thus rests on Premier Mussolini. For if Italy persists in its original course of aiding the rebels, it may prove impossible to prevent the fires now raging in Spain from spreading over the entire continent.

Police Court Congestion.

In reviewing District bills which failed of enactment at the last session of Congress, the Commissioners and local law enforcement officers have agreed to try another tack toward solution of the Police Court problem.

As any one who has been haled before it will testify, the Police Court is intolerably congested. Last year's attempt to improve the situation was a proposal to install magistrate courts throughout the city to which minor traffic violations might be referred. It was expected that arresting officers and defendants could easily report to these convenient benches for speedy judgments, thus clearing to some extent the calendar of the higher court.

Now, however, it is planned to seek expansion of the Police Court by adding another judge and another prosecutor. Supporting this newer idea is the argument that a large part of the Police Court congestion is due to collision cases witnessed by no police officer. These could not be tried before a magistrate court. By adding one more judge to the Police Court, these cases could be speeded through to judgment with the result that the District's entire judicial system could function more expeditiously.

Whichever may be the preferred solution, it is encouraging that the problem is receiving attention. A clogged Police Court is only an invitation to lax law enforcement, particularly in respect to the lesser ordinances. Officers are loath to make arrests when they know that each will mean several hours of their free time wasted while they wait for the case to move slowly toward a hearing.

The next move, of course, is to press for early action on the proposed bill in the next session of Congress.

Mr. Ickes On Progressivism.

When really momentous issues are at stake the public naturally expects something more than captious insinuations and a play upon personalities from a speech by a member of the Cabinet. Even a thoroughly political speech can be made constructive. But Secretary Ickes apparently had no such objective in mind when he addressed a radio audience on Monday night. His one purpose seems to have been to discredit Gov. Landon by fair means or foul.

Mr. Ickes had no difficulty in showing that Gov. Landon has changed his views on some subjects. In his acceptance speech the Governor candidly admitted that some of his thinking has been revised as a result of experience. Like millions of other Americans, the G. O. P. candidate undoubtedly admired the courage with which Mr. Roosevelt attacked the depression in 1933. But courage is only one of the qualities of a successful leader in times of crisis. If enthusiasm for the New Deal has cooled, it is largely a result of the many instances where courage was not supported by sound, practical judgment.

Moreover, if it could be shown that Gov. Landon's speeches and his record are utterly incompatible with the views he has recently expressed, Secretary Ickes should find little comfort in the assumption that such a characteristic disqualifies the Kansan as a Presidential candidate; for that conclusion is a direct slap at his own chief. The transformation of President Roosevelt's views after he left the Governorship of New York is too well known to need repetition.

One unfortunate result of Secretary Ickes' speech will doubtless be to drag these personal inconsistencies more prominently into the campaign.

Perhaps the weakest element in the address was the repeated sarcasm which Mr. Ickes applied to the term "practical progressive." Drawing upon this description of Gov. Landon, the Secretary referred to the Governor's candidacy as "an attempted compromise of what are in fact irreconcilable points of view." Thousands of citizens who are looking forward to the constructive solution of the intricate problems of our social and economic system will be astonished to learn from the director of the PWA that it is impossible to be practical and progressive at the same time.

By this attack Secretary Ickes revealed his utter failure to comprehend one of the most critical weaknesses of the New Deal. It is this very contempt for "practical" methods of attacking grave national programs that has brought so many New Deal experiments to a sorry end. One of the most vital elements needed to consolidate the economic gains already made is the substitution of methods and policies tested by experience for happy-go-lucky pursuit of "progressive" ideals. Mr. Ickes' bungling attempt to laugh this major issue out of the political arena ranks close to Mr. Farley's recent outburst about a certain "typical prairie State."

The Extra Woman.

If Booth Tarkington had collaborated with Emily Post, probably there would have been no Alice Adams. For, in that case, the wallflower heroine would have known whether to ask "him" in and what to have ordered besides chicken salad. If the Hoosier novelist had co-authored with Marjorie Hillis, there would certainly have been no fictional Alice. For Miss Hillis has gone Mrs. Post one better. Not only does she tell women how to write thank-you notes for orchids, but also how to philosophize on the absence of such floral tributes.

Miss Hillis' book on how to be happy though single should be of particular interest in the Capital City. For the last census report of the District discloses that there are 245,386 females here to 231,883 males. Even the more optimistic must perforce wonder about those 14,103 "extras." For, as Majorie Hillis contends: "To put it baldly—an extra woman is a problem." She entails extra expense, extra dinner-partners, and extra consideration. Whereas an unattached man is always a hostess' delight, a bachelor girl with no masculine arm to lean on is enough to ruin the best laid plans.

Miss Hilis does not profess to solve the problem of the spinster generally. As to Washington spinsters specifically, she simply cites the case history of one and lets it go at that. Perhaps she feels that the 9-to-5 toiler and the diplomat's wife are fully capable of fending for themselves. At any rate, that conclusion would be justified by the announcement of a Manhattan firm selling personality lessons here that when it comes to buying charm per capita, Washington ranks second. In which case, of course, it's the so-called stronger sex here that needs help.

We think we know why those ushers in refrigerated movie theaters are so stiff. They're frozen.

If the future of the country is going to be as dark as many predict, steps should be taken at once to postpone the future.

Too many are content with a hand-to-mouth existence these days—when it's Uncle Sam's hand.

The Calling Of Names.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Is it subtle New Deal propaganda or silly sentimentality which holds that the President by virtue of his high office should have no epithets applied to him even though they be deserved? Surely if the incumbent of that office has disgraced it by his actions, it is better that his unfitness for the presidency be fully exposed to the country than that he should continue to drag it into deeper disrepute.

The point is that in a national crisis like the present there are still millions of people who in some way must be shocked into a full realization that their liberty is actually at stake. While the newspapers state that each of the major parties has fixed on the Constitution as its main issue, back of this is the vital question whether the American people will permit their form of government to be changed to communism.

Spain's civil war gives a faint idea of what eventually may occur in America, should the New Deal manage to win the November election. This would mean that a slight majority of the voters (mostly "have-nots") would attempt to despoil the "haves." How long would 50,000,000 independent Americans permit any government to regiment their lives, dissipate their savings, devalue their life insurance, tax them out of their ownership of their homes and farms, confiscate or ruin by government competition their industries, weaken their morale and destroy their religion? With the foundation already laid for making America a totalitarian State under a dictatorship it would not be long after election before the New Dealers threw off the mask of altruistic concern for the forgotten man and unfurled the red flag of oppression.

It is to avoid any such outcome that the American people must be made to see Messrs. Roosevelt, Tugwell, Farley and the other New Deal political racketeers as they are. The present campaign is no pink tea; it is a crucial struggle for the survival of the American system. If necessary to save the Nation from chaos and civil war by calling names, then let us name the liars, double-crossers and traitors who today use their high offices to undermine liberty in America as it never has been threatened since 1776.

First Lady's Duties.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Waltman and your correspondent, Mrs. K. G. Grace, do not seem to believe a wife should be her husband's helpmate, but I am old-fashioned enough to have that belief. And for that reason I take issue with their remarks about Mrs. Roosevelt's activities.

Our American public life requires the fulfilment of so many far-reaching duties that a wife who cannot offer her assistance is not big enough to be the "First Lady of the Land." Lots of the dire conditions in slums, mines, on farms, etc., would never be remedied without the activity of women and I know of no better leader, qualified by training, experience and wholehearted interest, than the wife of the Chief Executive of our country.

New Deal's Barrier.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Landon, in speaking of the New Deal being a barrier to recovery, could not have been referring to the lucky farmers such as Mr. William J. Grove and others who seem to be the favorite sons of Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal.

I think he had in mind the thousands of poor laboring men making 20 or 30 cents per hour who, because of the New Deal and the great rise in prices of food products, can not obtain even a decent living. The situation of the laboring class is so critical that even happy farmers like Mr. Grove should pause to think it over.

Three Replies To Mr. Smith.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A letter in The Post of August 3, signed by Mr. W. Smith, says, in part, "It takes more than 'common sense,' as they all attribute to Mr. Landon, to be President of these United States, especially at a critical time like this. We have plenty of good men with common sense, but we need a man with 'uncommon sense,' a highly educated man . . . with broad vision, etc."

In other words, no man with just "common sense" could have concocted a scheme to sink seven millions of dollars in a venture like Florida Ship Canal and Passamaquoddy, after the Army engineers had ruled both not workable.

No man with just "common sense" could have canceled the air-mail contracts, thereby sending nearly a dozen Army aviators to their deaths. Broad vision would have been needed to see that far ahead.

No man with just "common sense" could ever hope to tell Congress to pass a certain law even though they might know it to be unconstitutional.

No man except a person with "broad vision" could look ahead and see a drought, thereby making it a supplement for destruction of pigs, corn, cotton and wheat, with millions of persons on some form of relief.

No man with just "common sense" could devise a brainy scheme like the NRA, thereby making it possible to send small-time battery makers and pants-pressers to jail.

H. RUSH.
District Heights, Md., August 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Did "highly educated" President Roosevelt indicate "uncommon sense" when he "planned scarcity" and destroyed millions of pigs, and millions of acres of wheat, corn and cotton, in order to benefit the farmers, at the expense of the consumers and the millions of unemployed?

What we need "at a critical time like this," is a man possessed of the common sense of the good old "horse and buggy" days, a plain, foresighted and educated man, chosen from the ranks of the intelligent people. Such a man is Gov. Alf Landon.

CAPT. CHARLES H. COE.
Washington, August 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

While reading the letter signed by W. Smith, I was led to wonder just what individual Mr. Smith had in mind when he so fairly and without prejudice criticized Gov. Landon's acceptance speech? I can't imagine! Would Mr. Smith please, for the salvation of our country, name the candidate he has in mind?

His is indeed a tall order and as no President we have ever had possessed all the qualities specified in this letter, I think Mr. Smith is an old meany if he doesn't reveal the identity of this superman.

Resents Political Pen Names.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been reading The Post consistently since I have been in Washington, not because I like The Post but because I consider it "the lesser of two evils."

Impartial representation of the news is a quality that all newspapers should possess, and that quality is sadly lacking in your columns. In the space of your paper devoted to letters from readers to the editor, you state that writers must give their name and address, except that pen-names may be accepted at the discretion of the editor. In exercising that discretion, you have been either wantonly or negligently unfair.

You accept political letters that are filled with inconsistencies, that are utterly devoid of proof and truth, and that are generally "Hooverish" in nature; and if they come in this category any kind of so-called pen-name seems to be sufficient. In one of your issues, five of the nine letters published were of the nature mentioned above and were signed by such names as "Anti-New Dealer," "American," "Constitutional Democrat," etc. In fairness why don't you require such letters to be signed by the writer in his own name? This game of hiding behind colned names and evading the real issues is typical of the campaign being conducted on behalf of Landon.

Every statement made by the Republican cohorts is unfounded, incapable of proof, and is in reckless disregard of its truth or falsity. For a complete answer to everything said by Hearst's candidate in his acceptance speech at Topeka, and in answer to the statements made by Hoover and those who didn't have the nerve to nominate him at Cleveland, I refer you to the speeches of the six Governors delivered over N. B. C. on Tuesday, July 28.

For a change, be fair and publish this letter.

CHARLES M. BROOKS.
Washington, July 29.

'We Did It.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Occasionally a reader rises to point to the blanket "rescue" of the farmers from pre-New Deal servitude or saving of a home as final evidence of New Deal-Rooseveltian bigness of heart and love of humanity. This is tough on private banks, loan companies, etc., that have likewise refinanced or "saved" properties (at a low cost that will not have to be absorbed by generations of long-to-suffer taxpayers), but which have been passed up in the distribution of laurels.

As any person of average judgment must know, Roosevelt and his Deal has had no more to do with the too small and much-belated recovery now being witnessed than did Harding and Coolidge for the boost following 1921. Since such as admission is not to be expected from the political source, true understanding helps explain the wholesale desertion of real Democrats from New Deal ranks.

With national income up perhaps $10,000,000,000 due in part to dividends resumed even a "benefactor of humanity" complex would not seem to justify continued Deal wasteage, save that such tactics would violate the Deal's most sacred "we did it" tenets. Also passage of time and need, for replacement merits a more powerful comeback than that witnessed. And it is the motor trade, which got no New Deal manna or gentle shower of checks, which has paced the groping and cautious recovery.

On Miss Pendleton.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial in The Post of July 28 expresses an appreciation of President Pendleton's life and service that finds response in the hearts of local Wellesley women.

We are glad to have the people know what she did for the college as an educational institution and how she raised the position of all women by her able service as president.

Thank you also for the prompt and dignified way in which the news of her death was reported. It was in keeping with the way Miss Pendleton lived.

MARTHA BROOKS BROOKINGS.

The Post Impressionist

Vatican And Screen.

Post Office, Wednesday.

THE POPE'S encyclical about motion-pictures was made public on July 3. Yet only now have the reactions to that message reached a stage where they may be studied in sufficient bulk to permit a thoroughly objective consideration.

Taking into account the field affected, this lapse of time is not surprising. Many of the most weighty responses necessarily come, on the one hand, from weekly and monthly publications—on the other, from persons whose positions imposed mature thought before any comment might be made and whose occupations are crowded with duties demanding day-by-day attention.

When, however, you do at last review the ultimate returns, you find much that must surprise some of the more hasty interpreters.

First the trade press.

The magazine Box-Office, mouthpiece of the motion-picture theater-owners:

"The encyclical, aimed largely at countries other than America, was garbled and 'colored' in the interpretation by a great many newspapers . . . Not alone has the Legion of Decency functioned with great success . . . but the motion picture industry, under its self-censoring plan, has achieved a wonderful record in its purpose of raising the moral standard of its films."

The Motion Picture Herald, often looked upon as a semi-official organ of the producers:

"Signal success in the greatest of the social adjustments of the motion-picture—achieved for it by the American industry in its adoption and operation under the Production Code—is recorded in terms destined to become historic in the encyclical letter discussing the screen by Pope Pius XI. This document and occasion mark for the screen the most important of its conscious, purposeful movements toward integration of the art with the fabric of civilization."

And the religious press of that church of which the Pope is the earthly head?

The Brooklyn Tablet is typical. It sees "in the encyclical a complete reiteration of everything for which the League of Decency has stood." It notes the urging of a continuance of this movement. But it points out that the Pope "is a realist; he builds up." It stresses his recognition of the cinema's capacity for "exercising a profound and moral influence," and his admonition to the bishops that "they are under obligation to interest themselves in every form of decent and healthy recreation."

The most significant comments of all were those made over the radio in the release known as "Endorsed Motion Pictures." For this is a program of criticism on current cinema productions, a frank and outspoken delivery of Catholic opinion formed deliberately and at first hand, by a special committee representing the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae. Forty-five women sit on that committee. They review the films in the projection-rooms of the producing companies. They are college-graduates. Some while ago, the New York Times explained:

"In instances where the reviewers cannot decide on a film, a board of consultors makes a final decision. This board is composed of doctors, lawyers, businessmen and priests."

Well, this is what the representatives of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae had to say of the matter:

"Although, in one or two instances, the encyclical was not very clearly interpreted in the public press, the Catholic press . . . helped immeasurably to clarify the situation . . .

"The encyclical . . . expressed apostolic approval and encouragement to the American bishops, the American people and the motion picture industry for the remarkable change effected through the (industry's) Production Code Administration . . . and an aroused, unified and constructive public opinion."

And, finally, that same committee's statement did not fail to quote one sentence from the encyclical which, even at his first glance, struck this columnist as quite nullifying all efforts to torture the message into a rebuke for the last two year's better-picture endeavors of the American cinema industry. I mean that passage wherein the Pope, after speaking of the cinema throughout the world, says to the American Catholic bishops:

"In particular you, venerable brethren of the United States, will be able to insist with justice that the industry in your country has recognized and accepted its responsibility before society."

If a mere columnist might do so, your columnist would felicitate The Washington Post on its absence from the group of those newspapers which the Catholic Alumnae charitably describe as interpreting the encyclical "not very clearly."

Olympic Comedy.

If there is any comedy at all in the great, grim spectacle of the Olympic games it is provided by Der Fuehrer himself, the great Caesar of the Nazi belief, whose "will" is accepted as the decree of Destiny and whose picture has been hung above the altars in some of the German churches. The house painter, exalted above even the humble Carpenter who established Christianity, took it on the lam when two Afro-Americans, by name Cornelius Johnson and Dave Albritton, won the Olympic high jump—a spectacular blow to that article of the Nazi faith which decrees the supremacy of the Aryan.

Destiny seems to have muffed one at this point, and Der Fuehrer left the premises to avoid the necessity of saluting the winners, although he had given his personal blessings to te Aryan winners of preceding events.

A great weakness of the Nazi cult is its utter lack of a sense of the ridiculous. You might say, too, that this same lack is a great source of strength, for if there were any humor in the Nazi system it would have rejected much of its credo as too foolish for the minds of intelligent people. But having no eye for the ludicroues, the Nazis frequently make themselves absurd in the eyes of normal human beings—and never more so than when their Caesar flees abruptly to escape the embarrassment occasioned by a couple of light-hearted members of an oppressed but radoubtable race.

* * * *

When Max Schmeling came to New York to fight Joe Louis Der Fuehrer was noncommittal toward his venture, but let it be known through his press bureau that Schmeling held no commission from the Hitler Youth. He was on his own, for Louis looked tough and Schemling, on the basis of past performances, seemed overmatched. But when Schemling won Herr Hitler got down a retroactive bet on him, and the victory was interpreted as a demonstration of the invincibility of the Hitler idea. He was bound to win because a Negro could not lick a Nazi, and that was the proposition which existed when the two Negro boys cleared the bar just a hair under 6 feet 8 inches and turned to find the mighty Caesar gone from his place. Judging both parties to the incident by their conduct, the Negro athletes emerged with the honors.

It has been explained that Caesar had to leave on time in order to avoid traffic congestion, but this is hardly credible considering that in Germany all traffic stops for Caesar. At Garmisch during the winter games his cordons lined his way elbow-to-elbow, and there was no convenience, but his own, even to the extent of impounding 10,000 spectators in the ice stadium for almost an hour after the hockey was over so that he and his party could depart in comfort.

* * * *

Perhaps now, considering further inevitable Negro victories in the current games, it will be necessary for Herr Hitler to make a point of greeting Jesse Owens, Ralph Metcalfe and other non-Aryans of deepest hue to overcome the world's impression that the greatest Nazi of them all, the host to the Olympic Games, knows nothing of the chivalry of sport. That, however, would only serve to emphasize the non-supremacy of the Aryan, and that would be an act neighboring on treason to the faith.

It is an embarrassing situation either way, though not for the colored athletes.

Sport has produced many strange and comic situations, but never one to compare with the spectacle of a Caesar driven from his throne in the presence of his own subjects by a few happy, inoffensive players in a game who didn't even realize what was going on.

This is certain, anyway—that if Caesar feels bound to hop up and flee whenever he sees a dark athlete flashing across the line, a winner over the Aryans, he isn't going to see much of the Berlin Olympics.

Thousands of Jobless Storm N. Y. City Office

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Job-seekers estimated by the police at from 2,000 to 5,000 today stormed the Municipal Building, wrecked a newstand and the desk of James J. McMahon, clerk in charge of the application bureau, and battered down two policemen before they were quelled by police reserves.

There were no jobs anyway, McMahon said as he surveyed the wreckage. He had advertised only examination for positions as attendant-watchman and attendant-messenger, if and when they become available. Twenty patrolmen, two captains and a lieutenant quelled the enthusiastic searchers.

Pennsylvania's 36 Votes

Bitterness Already Felt As Keystone State Campaign.

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

THE OTHER DAY a workman riding in a subway tried to take a Landon sunflower off the coat lapel of an acquaintance of mine. There was quite a fracas. This happened in Philadelphia, in Pennsylvania, which has 36 electoral votes.

The question in everyone's mind as to which way the votes will go, explains so ludicrous an incident as a Republican voter's being assaulted in a subway in this Republican stronghold, because he quite obviously intended to support a Republican candidate. It accords somehow with the fact that a registered Democrat, S. Davis Wilson, is at present the Mayor of Philadelphia, elected on the Republican ticket. And that a former Republican, the son, and grandson, and great-grandson of Pennsylvania Republicans, George H. Earle, III, is now Governor, elected on the Democratic ticket to be chief executive of a State that none has thought for many generations could be other than Republican.

To quiet-spoken, regular Republicans the whole situation is a mess, only partly ascribable to the fact that the State produced no successor to the eminent Matthew Stanley Quay, or Boies Penrose, or even the much smaller Edwin H. Vare, to serve as leader of the forces of Republicanism.

To the Democrats, whose ranks have increased since 1932 almost miraculously (if the spoils system be left out of consideration) the situation is a sort of opening of the Red Sea, through which they expect to walk dry-shod to another national Democratic Administration. At the same time they have their hopes set on a State administration that is thoroughly Democratic, and not—as at present—partly Democratic and partly what they delicately call, "reactionary Republican," the last owing to a Republican plurality in the Senate of 10. They give no thought apparently to the possibility of a flood of Republican victories turning the complexion of the House from the ruddy pink of the New Deal, to the red, white and blue at present fancied by the G. O. P.

State Generally Unsure Of Outcome In November.

ONLY PARTY LEADERS and officials, who are forced to do so for tactical reasons, venture to say today in which column Pennsylvania will be found after the last spasm of violence and billingsgate, of raucous shouting and muscling, has subsided on November 3. That many a head and many a reputation will be broken, at least temporarily, before that date, is quite evident.

The quality of campaigning that is now in progress throughout the State, and has been for several weeks, would in ordinary times provide a sufficient climax to a bitterly contested election. As a preliminary to what is to come, it is understatement to call it ominous. There has been sufficient violence in the past, when everything seemed under control, and Republican control at that, in this State of iron and steel, of dark coal mines and cool mountains, of industrial strife and big finance, and rolling farmlands. At present nothing is under control, and there is absolutely nothing that cannot happen—including a Democratic victory in November.

I have met one man who said the last cannot happen, but he stated it with the desperate faith of the old in verities that were once unchallengeable. Even the most stalwart of middle-aged Republicans only go so far in private as to express their hopes. They won't even guess at what will happen to those precious 36 votes.

The general tenor of the situation is not, of course, news to those who are interested in political speculation. In addition to the election "upsets" that occurred with Gov. Earle's victory in 1934 as a vigorously outspoken disciple of the New Deal and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, every device for appraising the probabilities that has been tried has confirmed the revelation that Pennsylvania for the first time in more than half a century is in the "doubtful" column. The "upsets," it may be recalled, included the election of three Democratic Congressmen from Philadelphia, the election of a Democratic Senator and all Democratic Representatives to Congress from Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, so that there were 22 Democrats who accompanied 12 Republican Representatives to Washington. In the State Legislature there was the success of a Democratic House majority, and a fair proportion of Democratic Senators.

THE LATEST major party poll of the Institute of Public Opinion showed a slight gain in Roosevelt's popularity in Pennsylvania. The extent to which the current State administration, through the various agencies at its command, has thrown itself into activities that it thinks will strengthen the trend toward Roosevelt and Democratic control for the State itself, is not likely to be grasped so fully by those who live in other States and are out of touch with the highly dramatic day-to-day development of events. Even some of those who are in the State, and immersed in its politics, can only guess at some of them; for not everything is on the surface.

Recently, by quick action, the Democrats succeeded in keeping under the surface whatever facts there might be to the advantage of their opponents in the administration of that fertile Federal project, the WPA; through applying for, and obtaining, a court injunction to prevent the Republican-controlled State Senate from investigating charges of political malfeasance such as lately put the Oklahoma WPA into the limelight. The courts ruled that the State had no power to investigate a Federal agency. The court was not able to stop off the freely circulated charges that the Administration has used WPA to strengthen national and Pennsylvania State political fences for adherents of the Democratic mule. These charges and rumors apply also to administration of the State Emergency Relief funds.

Republican strategy is in need of some of the high dramatic moments that the Democratic leadership has been injecting into the fight. The projected investigation might have supplied them, for it would have given some front page punch to their at present rather dull and prosaic task (especially after the threering circus of the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia) of trying to talk quiet horse-sense in the midst of the hurricane, and of moderating the monetary generosity of the New Deal saviors of the underdog and the underdog's voting relatives and acquaintances.

In the Republican press they are getting the first page space, of course, and with headlines almost as big as those employed by New Deal sheets. But on many occasions there has been a violation of traditional journalistic ethics in order to attain that end. What appears under the headlines is often as much editorial diatribe, originating in the office of the paper, as it is circumstantial reports of news developments. For that matter, neither the Republican papers nor the Democratic ones can find enough space in their editorial pages to say everything they think about their opponents. Front pages as well as editorial pages often become nine-tenths "interpretation" of the news, and one-tenth news.

Summer's Battle Centers Around Relief Appropriation.

THE STRUGGLE over relief appropriations that up to present writing has kept the Pennsylvania Legislature in emergency session for 13 weeks has provided the point of departure for much of the summer's battling over the outcome of November's national and State elections—when the Keystone State will be lifted from its "doubtful" status into the ranks of its traditionally Republican sister States or astound everyone including presumably a few Democrats by lining up behind President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Although relief has occupied the center of the prize-ring neither Gov. Earle nor any of his cohorts has let other issues lag entirely. While the more than half a million on the relief rolls, the more than a quarter of a million who are drawing money from the WPA and the emotionally responsive voters whose sympathies can be tied to them and the New Deal—unless led elsewhere by the Coughlin-Lemke-Townsend appeal—have provided the big act so far this summer, the additional half million votes or more that are claimed from labor organizations, have not been neglected.

In a heart-to-heart talk with steel workers at Homestead on July 5, Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, who is also secretary treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, touched the highest point in this line to date, by promising to include on the relief rolls all who come to grief in any effort to unionize the steel industry under the C. I. O. He appeared for this talk, which was partly in commemoration of the Homestead strike of 1892, escorted by numerous union men and a body of State police.

The presumptive influence of these masses, in a State that cast just under 3,000,000 votes in the last Presidential election, not only lures the New Dealers, but in view of the rugged propaganda that they have been in a position to put out, and of which Kennedy's talk was only one example has given them high hopes.

Republicans Not Willing To Concede Relief Votes.

THE REPUBLICANS, on the other hand, have not assumed that all these voters necessarily will favor the New Deal, and they have devoted their talents to pushing back onto Gov. Earle, and the Democratic House, every charge of merciless exploitation and hard-hearted "playing politics with human misery," that Gov. Earle, aided by his enthusiastic press, has laid on the shoulders of the Republican Senate, and its "economic overlords."

Gov. Earle has not hesitated to specify whom he means by the latter phrase, either in the press or over the air. At present, the roll includes Andrew W. Mellon, Joseph R. Grundy (manufacturing) Joseph N. Pew, jr. (oil), and Ernest T. Weir (steel); the first three of which, at least, are financial angels and are advertised by their opponents as current dictators of the Republican organization. A certain conflict of interests among them, at least in relation to tax measures, is generally credited with having kept such dictation as they are alleged to have attempted from being 100 per cent efficient.

Gov. Earle is himself a millionaire (sugar) and his opponents have not as yet pinned any angel on his back, nor have they ascribed angelic qualities to such hard-boiled entrepreneurs who support him as Albert M. Greenfield, the Philadelphia realtor, or David Stern, proprietor of the Philadelphia Record, the New York Post and a couple of Camden, N. J. newspapers, who has used everything but sound-equipped type to pump up enthusiasm for any and all features of the New Deal and its apostles.

Each side in this line-up has charged the other with making political capital from the misery of those on relief rolls, through obstructing legislative measures that were needed to supply funds for them. Peculiarly enough, the explanations of each side make sense, taken by themselves, and without reference to the Machiavellian principles ascribed by each to their opponents, and their opponents' alleged backers. But those of the Democrats, because of their strategic position, and the rather divided leadership of the Republicans, have made the most noise. They have, in fact, been a very good example of sowing the wind, in the hope that the resulting whirlwind will sweep them into further power.

Communist Agitators Seen In Harrisburg Galleries.

THE CHIEF RESULT to date has been to fill the galleries of the State Capitol with a noisy rabble of unemployed, among whom, even the Administration organs have charged lately, there is an undue proportion of Communist agitators. This rabble, whom it is fashionable to call "hunger marchers," have lately been acting, at least in part, under the auspices of the National Workers' Alliance, and both Democrats and Republicans want them to go away.

Original delegations were, some of them, transported at his own expense to Harrisburg, by Mayor Wilson, of Philadelphia. Later Gov. Earle was reported to be supplying the money with which to feed them on arrival. Their presence in the capital was, however, scarcely needed, to apprize either the legislators or voters of the undoubted hardships that exist among the unemployed throughout the State, and concerning which both parties seem to have been trying to find what they consider the most satisfactory and equitable solution to all concerned.

At present the Republicans are appealing to the solid citizens of the State, to those who have property and money and want to hold on to at least some of it, to those who believe in orderly processes of government, and to individual freedom to work and to employ workers.

The last appeal is ingeniously linked up with certain statements in Gov. Landon's acceptance speech, and is believed to be taking hold with workers who believe that under a Republican Administration there may be more confidence on the part of job-makers, and more activity leading to jobs. At the same time they are calling attention to the recklessness of statement, of expenditure, of mob appeal, of their opponents. And they are organizing women, youths, and foreign language groups, according to methods that for many years have put and kept the State in its traditional place as a supporter of the Grand Old Party.

With national strategy keenly aware of the importance of Pennsylvania's 36 votes, and their precarious status, it hardly needs saying that there will be powerful assistance from without the State. Gov. Landon's projected speech at his birthplace, West Middlesex, Mercer County, in the western part of the State late in August, as the beginning of his personal drive in the East, will not be the least of this. It may well serve to strengthen the old instincts and loyalties that many Pennsylvanians, even among those who ordinarily vote Republican, laid on the shelf when two and four years ago they voted to follow the wavering gleam of the New Deal into the fields of Farley, in search of the honey of Roosevelt.

They're Off in the Girls' Swimming Championship

East Tops West In Aquatic Meet At Georgetown

Young Capital Mermaids Compete at Pool for City Championship.

East met West yesterday at the Georgetown pool. The blistering heat was nothing when compared with the heat of the battle between the young Washington mermaids who were swimming for the city championship. Furthermore, the East triumphed, the first time in four years that such a disaster to the West has occurred.

The occasion was the annual interpool girl's swimming meet, held to determine whether Miss Washington swims best in the East or the West.

Western sympathizers forgot the sun and concentrated solely on the task of booing the Eastern victories. They had a lot of booing to do, for after dominating the first three places in the first class for 10-to-12-year-olds, the East made winning more or less a habit. Spectators who lined bathhouse roofs cheered their favorites all in a spirit of fun, while below, pool officials were keeping the pool clear of eager youngsters who insisted on a cooling dip between events.

Cutting the water like diminutive torpedoes, little girls had their moment in a 10-yard freestyle race, which Jackie Kinsley won for the West in the class for those 10 and under.

First-place winners for the East in the other events were Margaret Milbrandt and Josephine Zanilotti, who won two firsts, in the 10-to-12-year class. In the 15-and-16-year class, Marguerite Knupp won the 25-yard breast stroke, while Lena Guntow won the side stroke. In the 17-year-and-over class, Anne Tilson placed first twice.

Western entrants in the 13-and-14-year class took all three firsts, Helen Torreyson and Doris Mae Coleman doing the swimming, with Miss Coleman taking two firsts. In the 15-and-16-year class, Dorothy Keady won the freestyle, while Anna Leigue took first in the 17-year-and-over side stroke event.

Zioncheck Files In Congress Race

Olympia, Wash., Aug. 4 (AP).—Marion A. Zioncheck, Washington's play-boy Representative from the First District, filed for re-election here today. Two days ago he said he was withdrawing from politics because of the illness of his mother.

The inventor of the "Zipper" cocktail would make no statement here, saying he was returning to Seattle immediately and would prepare a "Zipper" there.

He said too many "erroneous statements had been made already," and he wanted to prepare a statement carefully.

His wife and three other persons accompanied Zioncheck to the secretary of state's office. His bride of only a few months filled in his declaration of candidacy on the typewriter for him.

Boy's Death Trial Ends in Deadlock

Luray, Va., Aug. 4 (AP).—The trial of Marshall Broyles, 15, charged with the pen-knife slaying of Cecil Jenkins, 21, came to an end today when a Page County Circuit Court jury reported itself "hopelessly" deadlocked.

Judge H. W. Bertram declared a mistrial.

The case will come up again at the September term of court.

140 in C. M. T. C. Are Graduated At Fort Myer

Col. Wainright Lauds Work; 3 District Youths Are Honored.

Holding their final drill before the critical eyes of Col. J. M. Wainwright and the softer gaze of parents, brothers and sisters, 140 C. M. T. C. trainees at Fort Myer were graduated yesterday to climax a rigorous one-month course.

Three Washington youths were included in the group awarded medals for meritorious endeavor. All of them "reds," or second year enrollees, they are: John J. Squadron Praised.

The review was held on the Fort Myer polo field. In his commencement address, Col. Wainwright paid high praise to the training squadron and urged the "reds" and "whites," second and third year students, respectively, to return next summer for advanced courses.

Robert D. Wilson, of Cumberland, Md., received the medal reserved for the best "blue" (fourth year) in camp. He also won the Civilian military education fund award as the squadron's outstanding member, enabling him to compete with leaders of other C. M. T. C. camps in the Third Corps Area for a four-day, all-expense tour to Washington.

Timothy F. Ruane, of Pittsburgh, was adjudged the best "white" in camp. Roland C. Wockenfuss, of Baltimore, received a medal awarded to the best Maryland trainee. The presentation was made by E. Brooke Fetty, commander, in behalf of the American Legion, Maryland Department. The Baltimore youth also received the National Patriotic Council medal for the best essay on the subject, "Why Is National Defense Essential?"

Fight for Child Of Mary Astor Shifts to Tampa

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 4.—Mary Astor's battle for her baby shifted today to Tampa, Fla., when her attorney obtained legal permission to try for evidence there "proving a previous marital relationship" of her former husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe.

The movie star is attempting to break the court order giving Dr. Thorpe complete custody of their 4-year-old daughter, Marylyn.

Along with the custody action, her lawyers brought an annulment suit. They based it on the assertion that Dr. Thorpe married Mrs. Lillian Lawton Miles in Florida, and was not divorced from her when he married Miss Astor.

So today the star's counsel, Roland Rich Woolley, was granted a court order to take depositions in Tampa "and the vicinity."

Among the names mentioned in the affidavit he presented were Mrs. Robert O'Neal, Robert O'Neal, Bert Carter, A. D. Carter, Joe Carter, Mrs. Leona Carter, Howard Smith, Mae Cross, G. C. Rankin, Dr. William M. Rowlett "and many others."

From these persons, Woolley said, depositions will be sought, directed particularly toward an alleged wedding reception for Dr. Thorpe and Mrs. Miles at Jacksonville, Fla.

It is the attorney's contention that "Dr. Thorpe and Mrs. Miles lived in Florida as man and wife, and later here as man and wife."

Later, Joseph Anderson, representing Dr. Thorpe, said he had retained Attorney R. D. Morales to take depositions in Tampa, for use in the surgeon's case.

Sylvan Theater

The Community Center Department presents the eighth summer festival program, featuring the Alice Louise Hunter Dancers, with Ray Williams as guest artist, together with a festival concert by the Washington Gas Light Co. Band, directed by Otto Siebenachen, and the Potomac Electric Power Co. Glee Club, directed by Harry E. Yeide. Accompaniments by Edith H. Hunter. Lighting effects by Harold Snyder. At the National Sylvan Theater. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Odds ran high last evening in favor of inclement weather, but the 4,000 who wagered on a long shot and ventured to the National Sylvan Theater for the Tuesday festival program were amply repaid for their trust in the indulgence of Jupiter Pluvius. And so, beneath a proscenium arch of clouds, from time to time silvered with lightning, the local public utilities companies offered their artistic talent in a pleasing program to which the Alice Louise Hunter Dancers added terpsichorean variety.

Earlier the Washington Gas Light Co. Band appeared on a program, but last evening they quite outdid that effort, presenting a worthily played program of familiar classic numbers.

The utilities artistry was further augmented by the Potomac Electric Power Company Glee Club, which sang seven programmed numbers, adding two encores by insistent demand. The group did ample justice to such numbers as the "Soldiers' Chorus" from Gounod's "Faust," Bullard's "The Sword of Ferrara," selections from Gilbert and Sullivan's "H. M. S. Pinafore," and "Oh, Susanna" (Foster), sung "without political significance."

The Alice Louise Hunter Dancers did well by a program which the Glee Club's selections divided into four parts. Mayhap the outstanding event of the dance evening was the appearance, as guest artist, of Ray Williams, from the Michael Nicholoff School of the Dance in Baltimore. Appearing in several numbers with Miss Hunter and ensemble, Mr. Williams for his particular contribution offered Nicholoff's "Sailor," a number of physical grace and rhythmic beauty and not without its moments of subtle wit.

Miss Hunter was seen in solo in two mazurkas, one by Larr and the other by Esperon.

Hollywood

Watching Filming.

Hollywood, Aug. 4.

There is one nice thing about Hollywood. Waiting long enough, you can see last season's Broadway stage hits . . . and with many of the original players.

JOAN BLONDELL.

The new tour for a Broadway play is to a Hollywood sound stage, and the typical billing, "With the New York stage cast," still applies, I am now doing my theatergoing.

A front row seat of a sound stage at Radio, and I watched Margo and Burgess Meredith play a scene from "Winterset." It is a pleasure to watch these performers work. If I miss a line or want to see the scene again, Director Al Santell has Margo and Meredith play it again.

There is an advantage to this type of theatergoing.

It is odd to see Margo and Meredith, who played all season in "Winterset," now receive instructions on how to say a line.

• • • •

Greta Garbo became merely Garbo in her billing because of a publicity campaign. Margo is really the only actress on the screen who is known by one name. This may be explained by the fact that her genuine name is Maria Margarita Gaudalupe Bolado Castilla. Try to put that on a marquee.

• • • •

Next to another sound stage to see another Broadway hit. Having seen a drama, I decided to vary my theatergoing. Now I will see a comedy, one of Broadway's biggest comedy hits. I watch Mervyn Leroy direct a scene from "Three Men on a Horse."

I saw a road company do the show, but every one said to me: "You should have seen it with the Broadway cast. You should have seen it with Sam Levene and Teddy Hart." I am now seeing it with Levene and Hart.

There is another advantage in the movie production of a Broadway play. The movies sign the hit performers from a stage production and then present the play with a better supporting cast. They do this because they have more actors at their command.

• • • •

After Levene and Hart play a scene, I ask Teddy Hart how he feels portraying the same character for the camera that he did for audiences. He answers: "During the first day I was nervous, almost as bad as on the opening nite. It's hard doing a comedy part, reading lines that you know get laughs and not hearing the laughs. You wonder what's wrong."

Three Who Lend Point to Triangular Drama

A marital drama of more than ordinary point and substance will be enjoyed by Washington picture-goers when "To Mary—With Love" is presented on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater following the current engagement of Shirley Temple in "Poor Little Rich Girl." The pivotal roles in the new Twentieth Century-Fox production are played by Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy and Ian Hunter, pictured above in the order named, left to right. Jean Dixon and Claire Trevor are among others who lend luster to the cast of distinction in a play that relates the events of a decade in the lives of a young married couple. Worth seeing when it gets here.

Nelson B. Bell

About the Showshops

"TO MARY—WITH LOVE." Our old friend Mammon takes an awful beating in this one. He was, it seems, at the bottom of all of the recurrent difficulties that beset the lives of Jock Wallace and his patient wife, Mary. Through the instrumentality of one Bill Hallam the old dabil cupidity finally took it on the chin for the long count—or so one is led to believe as the picture fades out and "The End" fades in.

BELL.

From the moment when it becomes plain that the story of this film is to be told by the flashback method, beginning with its concluding incident and then reverting ten years in the lives of the principals, to the day the Wallaces were married in the old Waldorf-Astoria in New York, and then working its way down the years to the present again, the spectator might be forgiven for suspecting that here was to be just "another one of those things."

As the action progresses, this conviction seems to be strengthened from time to time as situations of sheerest hokum present themselves. But not in any instance is the threat carried out. The hackneyed and hoary outcomes of familiar situations are consistently and miraculously evaded and in its closing reels the picture by a sound argument on the side of common sense and fidelity to the marriage vows offers a climax and denouement that somehow suggest the fine logic and impregnable psychology of the final scenes of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," although the two pictures in other respects are nothing alike.

Not a scant two hours after yesterday afternoon's private preview of "To Mary—With Love," your reporter is of the conviction that this production marks a high order of achievement in the conversion of certain aspects of such things as the court of domestic relations usually concerns itself with into engrossing and well-balanced entertainment.

Left to the lay judgment of the masses, it might be a little difficult to decide which is the male star of the picture, Warner Baxter or Ian Hunter. The press book and the billing, of course, make it plain that Mr. Baxter is the head man, but the screen makes it equally plain that his is the part of a thoroughgoing cad, whose life is completely and apparently irrevocably ruled by false standards of both personal and material worth, while Mr. Hunter's is the part of the straight-thinking fellow into whose lines have been written all of the platitudinous truths that eventually pull the married life of the Wallaces out of the fire. Both roles are played with exceptional skill.

No less can be said of the feminine parts of importance, of which there are three, instead of two. Myrna Loy, needless to say, is not threatened by either of the other two, who happen in this instance to be Jean Dixon and Claire Trevor, two blondes of ample capabilities. Not that Miss Loy is the perfect actress, but her part is approximately four times as robust as the other two put together.

"To Mary—With Love" will not be along to a local screen until Shirley Temple has made way for it by departing from the Palace, where she is currently charming large audiences. When it does arrive, it would be my guess that it will prove to be practically 100 per cent "box-office."

• • • •

And down at the Fox Film Exchange, where "To Mary—With Love" was screened for the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the press yistiddy, they had the nerve to tell us that while "To Mary" is a better picture than any other company has made this year, we ain't seen nuthin' yet until we get a peek at "Girls Dormitory," another Twentieth Century-Fox item that will be coming along soon. One thing I especially like about these film exchange folks is their superb emulation of the modest little violet!

• • • •

Recent bulletins from Master Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's, are unanimously to the effect that Thursday night's inaugural of the Fifteenth street engagement of Katharine Hepburn in "Mary of Scotland" will take on all of the colorful and noisy characteristics of a typical "Hollywood permeer."

In order that "she shall have music wherever she goes," Miss Hepburn's local debut in perhaps her most important screen role to date will be accompanied by the dulcet strains of a Scottish bagpipe band whose squeezing of the dudelsack doubtless will produce a hi'land skirl that will be audible for miles—and probably make it plenty tough for Art Brown, of WOL, while he is trying to air the arrival of the great and the near-great for Master Meakin's celluloid feast.

It is stated that many celebrities will be among the first-night audience, including Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Mr. and Mrs. Harry McBride, Signor Augusto Rosso, Italian Ambassador; Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Ugo Carusi, administrative assistant to the Attorney General; Henry Suydam, of the State Department; Acting Postmaster General Howes, Mrs. Howes and Miss Howes; Bartolomeo Migone, first secretary of the Italian Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Royce Powell, H. O. Chalkley, commercial counselor of the British Embassy and a considerable number of the Embassy staff; D. C. Commissioner and Mrs. George E. Allen and a large additional representation of the Diplomatic Corps and Washington's official and social life.

Motion pictures will be made of the arriving dignitaries.

• • • •

So we acknowledge with thanks friendly notes from Will H. Hays, out on his California ranch; Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Fox, sneni that "Spring Is Here" business; Harry Essex, visiting Gilbert Miller in England, and Dorothy V. K. Simon, in Norfolk, who sends in the "Knock-knock" to end all "Knock-knocks."

• • • •

Quick-Donovan-Back-Up-the-Wagon Note.

"Knock-knock," says Mrs. Simon—and I didn't say "Simple." "Who's there?" says I. "Dennis," says she. "Dennis who?" says I. "Dennis is the worst of the lot," says she.

Saratoga Springs, Aug. 4.—This is the town that "jack" built, the town of touted mineral waters and racing touts, the town of heartaches and headaches and "if" money, the town that slumbers peacefully for 11 months of the year and then comes furiously awake in the month of August, when the great racing stables meet here for the annual rendezvous of racing silks and satin-bodied thoroughbreds.

This is the town where hope springs eternal, where Lady Luck is wooed by prince and pauper, where gin trees serve as a green frame for the strained and tense faces of those who think they can beat the races.

This is the town that for 30 days is the hub of the American gambling wheel . . . A wheel whose spokes reach, fanwise, to every little town and every little cigar store in every little town where men and women make bets on the races . . . Sheridan Road

SYNOPSIS.

Eden Faraday, young secretary, opens the door of a taxi and finds a man murdered. She is taken to the police station, where she meets Jack Garnett, newspaper cameraman, and Owen Field, assistant district attorney, who arranges her release. Eden had been mistaken for Oracle Lincoln, a gunman's widow. The man murdered was a notorious gangster, Grappi. Eden's mother, Bridget Faraday, sells gowns and is in love with suave Sidney Creighton. Eden and her spoiled young sister, Robin, and brother Coburn, depend on their peppery grandmother. Because of rumor that Eden can identify the murderers Owen Field has her guarded. Her mother and Sidney escort Eden to a business appointment. When they leave her she is snatched by two evil looking men, but Field and his men rescue her. Field takes her to his mother's home where she is kept secluded. Jack Garnett climbs roofs to talk to her from her window.

INSTALLMENT IX.

A Fugitive Has Visitors.

"If you know something about this Grappi affair Mr. Field ought to be told about it," Eden argued.

"This is one of those things Field couldn't get in a million years. And if he knew it wouldn't do any good—only harm to everybody. Harm to you, probably. Will you go with me? It's safe—I wouldn't think about it if it weren't. It's just two pretty decent people who've got in a jam through no fault of their own specially—just as you got into one."

"We'll talk about it later. If you think it's a good thing to do, of course I'll go. And in the meantime, will you do something for me?"

"Anything I can. But I can't get into this house. Field has got a big flatty on guard and the place is a bastile. Has this old lady got gold hoarded or something?"

"I don't know her at all. I never saw this house before that I remember. This is what I want you to do if you will—go to my apartment—you know where it is?"

"Sure, I know; I work on a newspaper."

"Go there, then, and see my grandmother. Tell her that I'm all right, will you, please? Tell her not to worry."

"All right, I'll tell her. The place is probably being watched but I'll get in. Want me to bring you the news from home?"

"You'd better not. It might not be safe."

"O, it's safe all right. This area in here can't be seen from anywhere except the roof. I go in a drug store, go back to the rear to telephone, ease through a back door, climb a roof and a couple of garages, catfoot over a kitchen and here I am."

"All the same you'd better not try it. And you'd better go now. The maid here doesn't like me—she may be listening. And you are getting wet. Haven't you a raincoat?"

"I have one but I loaned it to a chap in the circulation department. He had a bad cough."

"You do things like that don't you! Things like hot coffee."

"Well—don't you?"

"Not enough. You make me feel horribly selfish. Good-bye—be careful."

"Good-bye," he waved a hand at her, eased along the ledge and vanished. Eden closed the sash silently. There was something engaging and reassuring in his direct, brown gaze, in the twitch of his lean cheeks and the thrust of his square chin. A girl could trust him—and she was certain that a frightened, unhappy fugitive would trust him, too. Gran would like him. She would invite him in probably, and give him molasses cookies and hot cocoa. Eden suffered a homesick pang as she thought of Gran. Darkness came on but she did not turn on the light. After all there was nothing to see.

At 8 o'clock her dinner was brought up and shortly after Owen Field came in.

"Hello, are you comfortable? Tough on you, being cooped up in here, but it was the wisest thing to do. Burke agreed with me on that. You've had a dreary day, I know."

"Not so dreadful." Eden's stiff feeling of resentment began to melt in spite of her. "Just monotonous. If I had something to read it wouldn't have been so bad."

"Sorry I forgot that. My mother has odd tastes in reading—you wouldn't care for the things she enjoys. I'll have something sent in."

"But—do I have to stay here? Tonight—and tomorrow?" She could not keep the dismay out of her voice.

"It will be best not to take any risks till after the inquest. I talked to your mother today—and to Stanley McLachlan."

"Poor Mr. McLachlan. I hope we didn't lose Ely's order."

She saw Field's eyelids draw a little straight. She could not know what he was thinking—that middle-aged Stanley McLachlan's concern for Eden had passed the bounds of a mere business responsibility. Vaguely Field had resented the acute agitation of a gray and settled jobber of hotel furnishings because this fair-haired girl had fallen into danger. Elderly, fusty business men had no business growing hoarse over a girl 20 years younger—a girl with eyes like Eden Faraday.

"He should be grateful that nothing worse happened," he said, dryly.

He wore dinner clothes, his hair was brushed and shining, he poured coffee for her from the silver urn and the movements of his hands were graceful and a little dramatic.

A dozen girls that she knew would be excited by this adventure; at being thus cloistered with Martin Burke's assistant, being served breaded veal and mushrooms by a handsome young man whose platinum chain and studs were smartly expensive, whose smile at her was half indulgent, half sharply interested.

As for Field, he had been telling himself brusquely that this was not merely a girl with Irish lashes and lips sweetly tender and sensitive, but a witness. That he must not mix sentiment with business. He should be on his way to Lydia Keane's dinner at this moment. He had promised Lydia, more to make peace for his defection of the night before than because she cared greatly for the group he would meet there.

Because his reluctance to leave this room disturbed him, he turned brisk and impersonal. He said, "I'll have something sent up for you to read. Good night."

Eden said, "Thank you and good night," wondering a little about his odd transitions of mood. One moment he was intimate and friendly, the next curt and aloof and slightly saturnine. A spoiled only son, she suspected, remembering the spoiled young people in her own household. Yet that was a little odd, too, since Sara Field's attitude toward her son had been neither admiring nor adoring.

• • • •

Field, on his way to Lydia's knew what he would find there. Lydia's possessive manner. Lydia's carefully achieved intimacies. And he did not want to marry Lydia. Lydia's eyes were green, her laugh was sophisticated, all the world amused her. She would never feel sorry for a frightened taxi driver.

Before he had rung her bell, he was certain that he could never marry Lydia.

• • • •

Coburn Faraday drove a rented car through the swooping wind along the North Shore drive, with spume and an occasional mist of rain scattering on the windshield.

Beside him a frail looking girl with a white, heart-shaped face and indomitable black eyes, huddled close to him, a fur collar turned up close to her lips, a vagabond small hat canted over one eye.

Her name was Raquel, she had been married and divorced, she was older than Coburn and, in spite of her wisp of a body and tiny hands and feet, a person so alive, so tense with fiery purpose that she blew people along with her like a rushing wind.

Coburn was a little afraid of her, a bit flattered and much fascinated. Raquel's background was obscure. He knew that her mother owned a beauty shop in Rogers Park, that her divorced husband had been a violinist named Rusak, that Raquel danced sometimes in supper clubs and that she knew practically every bartender and orchestra leader in the high spots, but what she was deeper and beyond these surface details, the boy had never had the courage to try to learn, though he knew Raquel had decided that she was going to marry him.

Just how he was going to marry with no income and the family raising a row about law school and the little he spent now, was a matter that puzzled Coburn a bit, but whenever he voiced any uncertainty to Raquel she either laughed or flew into one of her buzzing impatient angers that made her resemble an infuriated small black bee.

She was angry now, as they crept northward through the foggy dark.

Importance of the First Bid.

Granting that there is hardly such a thing as an unimportant bid, it is still a fact that the first bid (or pass) of each player is the one that must be right! Rarely is it possible to correct through subsequent bidding an error made on the first round. The reason for this is simple. The primary impression created in partner's mind may be qualified or modified by additional information, but never completely wiped out!

That being the case it naturally follows that the utmost pains should be taken to make one's first bid as accurate and informative as possible. A certain bid may appear to be, at first glance, the only logical one. Nevertheless, it is well worth while to examine the hand for others. The second glance takes but a moment and may prove a sound investment. North, in today's hand, should have taken that second glance.

West, dealer.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 club	1 spade	pass	pass
Double	pass	pass	pass

North might have rescued himself from a bad situation by bidding one no trump over West's takeout double had he known that East was going to leave the double in for penalties.

Of course with South's miserable holding any contract that North and South got into would have been none too good, but it was the spade bid itself that opened the way to catastrophe. Had North properly doubled the one club bid for a takeout, and had East then passed, South could have bid one diamond. West would double just as he did in the actual bidding, but East certainly would not have left West in this double.

In the actual bidding the opponents had the immeasurable advantage of hearing South pass to his partner's spade bid even on the 60 score, which of course told a story of complete destitution. With that news out, obviously they could stretch takeout doubles to the breaking point since they could be quite sure that South was either devoid or practically devoid of entries.

East opened the eight of clubs. West won and shifted to the four of trumps. Declarer ducked and East's nine took the trick. The club was continued and won by West, who now laid down the jack of trumps. North covered and East's king won. A low heart was the next lead and West made the excellent play by failing to put up his ace, playing the ten instead. Declarer won and returned the heart queen. West won and laid down his remaining high club. North attempted to coax a diamond lead by discarding a diamond on this trick, but West exited with his last trump.

Now declarer made the best of a bad bargain by getting East into an end play. He won the trump lead with the ace, cashed his jack of hearts and threw East in with the fourth round of hearts. East cashed his high trump, drawing declarer's last, but was now forced to lead a diamond up to declarer's king. East won the ace and had the Hobson's choice of presenting declarer with a diamond trick or dummy with a club trick. Thus, in all declarer managed to take four tricks on his seven trick contract for a penalty of 800 points.

Quiet Reigns at Embassy During Spanish Revolt

Several Members of Staff Here Are Vacationing in Home Land in Midst of Revolution; Padilla Rumor Denied.

By Dudley Harmon.

The extreme quiet which has reigned at the Spanish Embassy here ever since the first gun of the revolution was fired continues unbroken. Embassy officials dare not leave the city for fear they will lose touch with important developments in their country.

Several members of the embassy were vacationing in Spain when the revolt broke. The Agricultural Attache and Senora de Echegaray received the news on the boat going over and landed right in the thick of things. The Counselor of the Embassy and Senora de Yrujo have been in Spain since early last spring.

Denied vigorously at the embassy yesterday was a rumor current around Washington that the former second secretary, Senor Don Ramon Padilla, had joined the rebel cavalry forces. Senor Padilla left the Capital suddenly several weeks ago to join his father, former ambassador to this country, at their summer home in San Sebastian, where there has been bitter fighting. The former ambassador, once chamberlain to the king, retired from the diplomatic service after the downfall of the monarchy, while his son joined the Republican Party.

Meanwhile, the friends of Senor Olivares are doing what they can to cheer him and divert his attention somewhat from the grave situation in Spain. At a small informal dinner party held this week, the guests were careful to avoid any conversation remotely suggesting the revolution.

Among the guests at this dinner were the Secretary of the Italian Embassy and the strikingly lovely Countess Roberti, Mr. Jasper DuBose, and Miss Dorothy Cassard, daughter of Mrs. Harrison Cassard. Countess Roberti has returned to Washington for the remainder of the summer from Bernardsville, N. J., where she has been visiting her father, Mr. Ogden Hammond, former Ambassador to Spain.

Mr. DuBose will leave today with Mr. Emmons Smith and two other friends for the Pine Valley Golf Club, near Philadelphia, to enjoy a foursome. He will then join Mrs. DuBose and his children at Wainscott, Long Island, where they will be the guests of Mrs. Grace Hendrick Eustis, formerly of Washington, now living in New York.

Macks Arrive At Maine Home

Will Remain at Rockwood Until September; Son and Bride Abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mack, who left the Capital June 27 to attend the marriage of Mrs. Mack's son, Mr. George Belicovitch, and Miss Mary Louise Stafford, in New York, are now at their summer home in Rockwood, Me.

They have been enjoying cool weather, according to letters to friends, and the water in the lake on which their home is located remained at a temperature of about 50 and has been too cold for swimming.

Mr. Mack's brother and sister-in-law, who stopped for a short visit on their way down from Canada on a motor tour, arrived with a spell of rainy weather. It rained daily while they were there and kept them all indoors, so Mr. and Mrs. Mack and their guests spent much of the time playing bridge.

Mr. Belicovitch and his bride are in Europe on their wedding trip and will be joined in France by Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Smith, another bridal couple from Washington, who were married in New York and are spending their honeymoon abroad. Mrs. Smith is the former Miss Virginia Forward, daughter of Mr. Alexander Forward, of New York City.

Mr. Mahoney, Wife Return From North

Legation's First Secretary Spent Vacation Fishing in St. Lawrence.

His Cottage Is on Island Leased to One Family for 77 Years.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Fish in the St. Lawrence River near Stanleys Island, Canada, are having a much happier time now than they have had for the last month. Two persons whose hand-caught bait has been luring many of them from the water into the frying pan, have left the island and returned to Washington. They are the First Secretary and Charge d'Affairs of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney.

Mr. Mahoney is an ardent fisherman and his wife, the former Miss Frances Moloney, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Moloney, of Ottawa, whom he married in June, 1935, is a convert to the sport. The veranda of their cottage on the island resembles a scientific laboratory, says Mrs. Mahoney. Minnow pails, traps, sinkers, spinners, reels and rods of all descriptions were arranged in orderly fashion. And they were not just for exhibition. Fish for the family and fish for friends—bass, pickerel, perch—were caught every day.

Mr. Mahoney went out at 6 a. m. to catch his minnows for bait and his wife joined him later in the day.

Indian Reservation.

The island is an Indian reservation under the Canadian flag and is leased to one family for a period of 77 years. Although no Indians live there, it cannot be sold. It is in an unusual location, 1 mile from Ontario, 2 from Quebec and 1½ from the New York State line. The only cottage occupied except that of the woman who leases it was the Mahoney's.

Adjacent to it are other small islands, some under the Canadian government, and some under the United States. By the provisions of an old treaty, the Indians who live on them may trade freely whether they are under the American or the Canadian flag.

Mr. Mahoney has been going to Stanleys Island for years and has a devoted friend in an old fisherman who lives on another small island nearby.

Sole Inhabitant.

He is the sole inhabitant of his little island and lives in a tin shack under a willow tree, the only tree on his barren little waste. He sets night lines for sturgeon and practically supplies the New York market both winter and summer. He and Mr. Mahoney met every morning as he went to inspect his lines and Mr. Mahoney started out for minnows. One day Mr. Mahoney told him they needed wood for the fireplace at the cottage and gave him 50 cents to bring some in. He arrived with almost a cord, cut in lengths for the fireplace, and, to Mrs. Mahoney's great surprise, not only delivered it to the boat landing but carried it to the porch and piled it there ready for use.

The water about the island is as blue as the Mediterranean, she says, and clear as crystal. On one side of the island it is only 4 or 5 feet deep for quite a distance out, and warm enough for swimming. Farther out, there is a sheer drop and the channel is deep enough for ocean-going boats. They watched Canadian, United States and Norweigan freighters go by. The lake vessels were distinguished from those which were ocean-going by the fact their engines were in the stern of the ship, while the engines of the ocean freighters were in the center to equalize the weight in a heavy sea.

Motored to Canada.

The Charge d'Affairs and Mrs. Mahoney motored to Canada by the western route, through Ithaca and Syracuse, and returned through the Adirondacks. They will be here for several weeks but probably will go back again for a short time in September. Their plans will depend on the date of the arrival of the new Minister of Canada, Sir Herbert Marler and Lady Marler, who recently returned to their country from Japan.

Mr. Mahoney has been in the diplomatic service in Washington for 18 years, first as Canadian Attache of the British Embassy and, in 1927, when the Canadian Legation was established, as its First Secretary. He was decorated commander of the British Empire last year on June 3, two days after his marriage, by the late King George.

Miss Beales Bride Of Charles J. Bates

Miss Evelyn Virginia Beales became the bride of Mr. Charles J. Bates in a ceremony at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elton Beales, at 3 p. m. yesterday. The Rev. Walter F. Atkinson officiated.

Miss Beales wore a dress of navy blue chiffon printed with small white figures and a large white hat of hand-made straw. She wore a corsage of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. James Cohee, as matron of honor, wore a flowered dress with a navy blue net coat and white accessories. She wore a corsage of yellow roses. The bride's brother, Mr. Roger W. Beales, of Chicago, was best man.

Capital Woman Takes Newport Contest Lead

Mrs. Skirvin Adams Has 700 Votes for 'Best Dressed Woman.'

Mrs. Skirvin Adams, of Washington and Newport, has appeared suddenly to take the lead in the contest for the best dressed woman now being conducted for sweet charity's sake at the Rhode Island resort. She has 700 votes. Mrs. Joseph Washington Frazer is second, with 432, and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, of Washington, who was leading last week, has droped to third place with 344.

Mr. Eugene Roberts, of this city, who has been visiting his mother-in-law, Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, has fallen far behind in votes for the best dressed man, although he also was at one time in the lead. Mr. James Benedict Cottrell now is leading in the sartorial contest with 380 votes. Maj. Henry S. Wheeler is second, and Mr. Beverley Bogert, sr., is the most athletic, according to the votes.

Picking up 3,600 votes over the week-end, Mrs. Howard G. Cushing has forged rapidly ahead to second place in votes for the prettiest woman. Mr. and Mrs. Cushing are guest friends of Baron Paul Schell, Secretary of the Hungarian Legation, and he frequently visits them at their Newport home. He is at present in Hungary for the summer.

Miss Virginia French, sister of Mrs. John Jacob Astor, who formerly led in votes for the prettiest girl, has dropped to fourth place. She now is touring the film studios with Mr. and Mrs. Astor. Miss Adelaide Whitehouse, daughter of former State Senator and Mrs. William F. Whitehouse, now is in first place.

Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Much pride is expressed at the Treasury Deparitment over the success of Bob and Henry Morgenthau, young sons of Secretary and Mrs. Morgenthau, with their sailing boat off Edgartown, Mass., where they are passing part of the summer. While the Marie has not finished first as yet in any of the races, the boat has been among the first at the finish line in a number of the events and the lads' friends are confident they will take a blue ribbon by their master sailing before the summer is over.

Among their close competitors are Joe and Jack Kennedy, sons of Joseph Kennedy, sr., former chairman of S. E. C., who have won first place in Class 1 with their Flash II.

Word comes in a letter from overseas that Mrs. Marshall Field is established for the season in a house on the lake in Regents Park, London. Mrs. Field has landscaped her new place and has purchased a little Japanese boat on which her friends are enjoying little journeys on the lake.

A romance that began in Washington has been revealed in San Francisco with the announcement there by Capt. Earl R. Shipp, U. S. N. and Mrs. Shipp of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Betty Shipp, to Lieut. Gaulden McIntosh Watkins, U. S. A.

Capt. and Mrs. Shipp and their daughter recently went to San Francisco after living in Washington and other Eastern cities for a number of years. Lieut. Watkins has been in San Francisco for several months as aid to Brig. Gen. Woodruff at the Presidio.

Miss Shipp was in the group of Army and Navy girls who combined social festivities in Washington with school work as students at the George Washington University.

Congratulations will be in order tomorrow for Mr. Robert Woods Bliss, retired diplomat, art collector, book collector and authority on international affairs on his sixty-first birthday. Mr. and Mrs. Bliss are spending the summer in California.

Since retiring from his post as Ambassador to Argentina, Mr. and Mrs. Bliss have passed much of their time at their historic Georgetown home, Dumbarton Oaks. There, amid art and other treasures they have acquired over many years, they have done much entertaining.

The Bliss art collection is one of the finest private galleries in Washington and they are adding to it constantly examples of foremost contemporary and modern art.

About a decade ago the Blisses bought The Oaks, once the home of John C. Calhoun and other notables and latterly occupied by Col. and Mrs. Henry Blount, names with which to conjure in the social and patriotic history of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Bliss changed its name to Dumbarton Oaks and made some improvements, but preserved the original outlines of the famous house.

The original Oaks was built in 1801 by William H. Dorsey, then judge of the Orphans Court of the District of Columbia. It was afterwards the home of Edward M. Linthicum, founder of Linthicum Institute and prominent in the early history of the District and of Maryland.

John C. Calhoun lived there while he was Senator, Secretary of State and Vice President. For a time the old place was called Monterey.

For a number of years Mr. and Mrs. Bliss only returned to Dumbarton Oaks at intervals after improvements were completed, but since 1933 they have passed most of the winters at Dumbarton Oaks.

John F. Simmons to Return.

Mr. John Farr Simmons, chief of the visa division of the State Department, will return Sunday to his apartment at Stoneleigh Court. He has been in Texas for a month as a State Department representative at the Centennial Exposition.

The fast-going division will also have a large list of entries.

R. H. Alexander, Mr. E. L. Redmond, Mrs. D. N. Lee, Mr. Lawrence Lowenbach, Mr. George Casilear, and Mr. Taylor Hardin.

A sale of antiues during the intermission will be another attraction. Among the articles to be offered for sale is a call bell used by Abraham Lincoln when in the White House.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Overcome Nagging and Fault Finding Is the Problem of Wife Whose Husband Is Cold to Her.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I don't think I have read in your column an inquiry from any correspondent as to how he could really find out what he himself is like; and if, having faults, how he could set about correcting them. I know we never see our faults as baldly as others see them, but usually we know of one or two which are the worst.

* * * *

Mine in particular are hasty temper and nagging. I used to think it was just one of those tempers that flare up and are over with, but a couple of times recently I have done things on impuse which have caused me to decide that something has got to be done. The nagging is something I try to get over, but it seems to go on. I read a lot, including books on psychology, and they are helpful and interesting, but soon forgotten.

* * * *

I am married and have two children. We could have a happy home, but we certainly do not have. My husband has his faults and virtues, both, I think, of the passive variety. His most annoying trait is his procrascination; although perhaps I should give his emotional coldness first place. I stay with him realizing that the children have a better home and future than would be theirs otherwise. I would like to feel sure that I am capable of treating him with politeness always, without ever getting upset when he lets me down, as he does so often. I realize I can't change him and that is why I am hoping I can change myself and so make a happier home atmosphere.

Having had an unhappy childhood, owing to the death of my mother, and having no other intimate friends to talk things over with, I am hoping you can point out a way for me to help myself. Under the circumstances you will understand why I cannot give you my name and address. If you will answer me through your column, I will see it, as I read The Post daily. HOPEFUL.

Achieve Detachment.

DEAR HOPEFUL: If you as a wife are emotionally unsatisfied and your husband is unresponsive to you, emotionally, it is small wonder that you are irritable and fault finding. Your irritability and nagging are but symptoms of fundamental disharmony between your husband and yourself, and certainly not the cause of discord. This is proven by the fact that you are entirely aware of your shortcomings, and constantly make resolutions—which are as constantly overthrown—to weed them out.

* * * *

About the only thing you can do toward achieving reasonable self control and serenity of mind it to stop looking to your husband for complete emotional release and divert your psychic and physical energies into other channels. Outdoor exercise might save the situation: such as tennis, golf, horseback riding, swimming. Too much reading, or too much of any other sedentary occupation, will only aggravate your tenseness. Get something to occupy your mind other than your husband, family and home. Espouse a cause: the coming election, women's rights, social legislation for the underprivileged, international peace or national preparedness, or any other cause which happens to occur to and appeal to you.

* * * *

Plan your days for a week or so ahead, so that you will have little time for brooding on your situation, or reflecting on your husband's annoying idiosyncracies. Know in a general way what you are going to be doing on forthcoming mornings, afternoons and evenings. Make engagements that you are forced in conscience to keep. You will probably be able to treat your husband with consistent politeness only when you have achieved a certain emotional detachment toward him. In other words, when you have finally and completely accepted him for what he is, and have ceased to entertain any hopes of making him over, or of securing an adequate response from him.

* * * *

It is advisable, also for you not to try to make yourself over, but rather, as I have said, to find a fuller medium of expressing yourself than you have achieved in your marriage. Yours is a personal emotion disturbance, and if you have done much reading along psychological lines, you already know that it is possible, desirable and sometimes absolutely necessary to sublimate into other fields of self expression on a frustrated emotional urge which knows no possibility of release in the desired direction. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You have helped many persons in solving their problems. Would you please help me solve mine? I would like to have several names and addresses of firms doing mineral assaying in the United States at present. I have valuable mineral stones but there is no equipment or apparatus to which I have access. I will watch for your answer in The Post. With many thanks, very sincerely. SUBSCRIBER.

* * * *

DEAR SUBSCRIBER: By writing to J. W. Furness, chief of the Metal Economics Division, Bureau of Mines, 900 F street northwest, Washington, D. C., or by calling in person at that office, it is likely you can get the information you want. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Leaving Baby Alone at Night Tempts Fate

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE SMITHS were attending the movies in the evening after the baby was in bed. They had no one to leave him with and since he was not yet 2 they naturally did not like to take him along.

Of course he could have slept in his carriage in the lobby of the theater. But they felt, very wisely, that the dangers of infection and of kidnaping were too great, and that sleep in the glare of publicity and electric lights was not healthy.

They waited, therefore, until he was asleep, and slipped out for the evening's entertainment, confident of his safety; for, once he was settled for the night, he fell asleep and did not stir again before morning.

There are many such happy-go-lucky parents, and most of them seem justified in their optimism. The baby sleeps uninterruptedly during every absence, and they pay no price for their excursions. None the less, they are running great risks, and though in 99 cases out of a 100 the baby is safe, there is always the off-chance that may prove fatal.

He may suddenly develop croup in their absence. It frequently comes on without warning and the child may choke to death in a severe attack.

Or he may have a nightmare and wake up screaming to find himself alone in the house. The fright may have a lasting effect on his nervous system.

Most serious of all is the danger of fire. He may be burned to death simply because no one knows that he is there.

It is hard to give up the occasional party or picture show, but it is a small price to pay for the safety of one's child.

Generally someone can be found to stay with the baby, or a neighbor will take him in for a few hours until his parents return.

Form Judged By Attitude To Servants

Order Given as Courteous Request Bespeaks Good Breeding

By Margaret Wallace.

IN PROBABLY no other domestic relation are signs of good breeding or lack of good breeding as apparent as in the attitude toward one's own and other people's servants.

The question of other people's servants is one that must be given careful consideration by those who wish to abide by the rules of good form. A house guest will not give orders to the servants unless it is a special maid assigned to her service, and even then the orders should be put in the form of requests. No well-bred person will complain of another person's servants unless it is absolutely necessary. If the complaint is absolutely necessary it should be delivered to the mistress in private and as tactfully as possible. No one ever complains of servants before them.

Query—I am a married woman and have just been at a house party in Virginia. Instead of calling me "Mrs." the servants called me Miss Belle. I am about the age of the daughters of the house. The servants all call the daughters "Miss," even though one of them is married. Do you think this is disrespectful?

Answer—Certainly not. It is the custom in Virginia and many other States for servants to address the young women of the family as "Miss." In fact, it is a sign of liking and respect.

Query—Recently my maid spilled ice water on the handsome gown of a guest in our house. I scolded her good and apologized to the guest. My daughter says the apology was correct, but that I should have waited until the guest departed before I scolded the servant. I feel that would have seemed as though I was indifferent and did not intend to correct the maid for her carelessness.

Answer—Your daughter is right. Your apology should be a very quiet and brief one, such as "I am very sorry." This should be sufficient to let the guest know you regretted the accident. You should never correct your servants before guests.

Query—Is it necessary to introduce your servants to house guests?

Answer—It is not necessary. But it is good form to tell the servants the names of the guests so that they may know how to obey your orders in regard to them. It is also good form to tell the guests the names of the servants with whom they will come in contact. The mistress of the house may say: "This is Mary, who will be glad to be of service to you while you are here. Mary, will you see that Mrs. Jones is comfortable?" It is proper for the guests to say "Good morning, Mary," by way of acknowledgment, to which the servant should reply, "Good morning Mrs. Jones."

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Posed by Ketti Gallian.

Face Powder Light in Texture and With Mild Scent Ideal For Summer; In Many Shades.

THIS word-of-mouth advertising is a great thing among women interested in cosmetics. A woman came to me recently and told me about a face powder that was sent to her as a gift. It was so good, she said, that she kept buying it over and over again and will now use nothing else. Her reasons were that it had such an extremely mild scent, it comes in such perfect shades and costs very little.

This is not a heavy face powder. Some women very strenuously object to a powder that clings too well, especially when they first apply it. I noticed that after using a foundation cream, if I use a heavy powder I have that pasty look for the first hour, until some of it falls off or is blown off. Of course, you pay your money and take your choice, and if you want a heavy powder I can tell you about some. In the meantime, I want to recommend this one because of its excellent qualities and because it is made by a manufacturer you can depend upon.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column telephone The Washington Post, NAtional 4200, Branch 333.

Ethel Shutta Links Careers With Marital Happiness

Husband's Interests, However, Should Be Primary to That of Wife's, in Opinion of Singer.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

ETHEL SHUTTA, the singer, took a back seat for half an hour yesterday while Mrs. George Olson talked of her husband, her boys, the home on Malibu Beach, and her ideas on making a success of marriage and a career at the same time.

"I believe a career helps, rather than hinders, marital accord," said the attractive wife of the orchestra leader, as she sat in her dressing room at a local theater and applied the finishing touches to her make-up. "It gives the wife an absorbing interest, takes her mind off household trifles and her husband's shortcomings (if he has any), keeps her from smothering her children with too much attention and trying to tie them to her apron-strings for life.

"There are cases, of course, in which the wife gets too absorbed in her work and sacrifices her husband's interests to her own. But you don't find that in many households based on love and unselfishness—two prime requisites for marital success."

"Happiness Not Accidental."

Mrs. Olson thinks she has been particularly fortunate in having "one of the world's best men as a husband." But even a good man isn't insurance against a trip to Reno "unless both the husband and the wife are determined to make their marriage jell," she said. "Happy wedlock isn't accidental, and it isn't a gift of providence; it is the result of perfect understanding, tact, a sense of humor, and a bond of common interests."

Other factors that in her opinion make for marital success are as follows:

1. Faith between the husband and wife so that jealousy never enters into the picture at all. "If I got upset every time some woman sends Mr. Olson a mash note or calls him on the telephone, or if he turned green eyed every time a man looked in my direction, we'd probably have found our way to the divorce court long ago," she said.

2. Children—"to furnish the strongest bond of interest between any husband and wife." (The Olsons have two boys—Charles and George, ages 9 and 7, respectively. "They both look exactly like my husband," she said, as she displayed a recent photograph of them).

3. Recognition of the fact that the husband's career should be considered the more important. "When one has to be sacrificed to the other, it had better be the wife's," she said. "No husband can be happy if the spotlight of attention leaves him completely in eclipse."

4. Deciding to make a success of marriage in spite of any difficulty. "So many couples reach the parting of the ways because they go into wedlock with no serious intention of working at it, and of making necessary compromises," she said.

Mrs. Olson is convinced the average discontented, nagging wife needs, first of all, "something to keep her busy. If she can have some part in her husband's career, so much the better. But anyway, she must work—and work hard.

"Household Not Enough."

"She may be able to find enough household duties to keep her occupied, but I don't think so. From what I have observed, the average woman today cannot find a satisfactory medium of expression in domestic activity exclusive of everything else. If she does, she generally turns out to be a very uninteresting person. Her outlook narrows down to her own four walls, her wardrobe, her husband and her children. At best, she is but a 'nice homebody' whom nobody particularly cares to cultivate.

"A woman's best bet in enhancing her own attraction as the years go by is to have some absorbing interest outside her home and family—whether it is a career, a club or a hobby."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Backache.

Mark Twain's remark that "Every one complains of the weather but nobdy ever does anything about it" applies with full force to back pain, "cricks" in the back, and that dull ache that often appears at the lower end of the spine. Distress in this area is so common and its cause is often so obscure that many victims—after a few feeble attempts to find relief—give it up as a bad job or ascribe it to the climate.

Correct Posture.

When we realize how much weight and strain is borne by the pelvic bones we cease to wonder why pain exhibits itself in this region. The spinal column rests upon the sacrum, a V-shaped bone which forms a wedge low in the back between the two large wing bones that shape the hips. These in turn hold up the thighs. We may regard the sacrum as a keystone that receives the total weight of the trunk, head, neck and arms.

If one stands very long in an out-of-ballance posture so that the body pressure is unevenly distributed, pain in the sacroiliac joint (where the sacrum joins the hip bones) may result. If we walked on all fours the force would be sustained by the thigh and the arm bones instead. All of which emphasizes the importance of watching overweight as every pound of excess fat in the abdominal wall adds just that much overload to the lower end of the spine.

Any joint that is 'on a stretch" for a long period of time cannot fail to rebel. There is a tendency for the tissues to become thicker and heavier in order to meet the strain and sometimes actual inflammation ensues. Overexercised joints frequently become water-logged; for example, "water on the knee." If one of us would take 10,000 steps walking on the outer edge of the foot (the sole turned inward) the ankle joint would swell and become very painful. If the process werp continued the structures of the joint would change so that after a time the ankle might accustom itself to the new situation by the development of new tissue supports.

This emphasizes the importance of correct posture, which implies an even distribution of weight upon bones and muscles that are designed to support it. After all, a good standing or walking form is easy to acquire and not difficult to maintain. It may demand, however, exercise for the strengthening of a flabby abdominal wall, back muscles and those of the buttocks. Sometimes a girdle will work wonders. In other cases exercise should be combined with rest and it is surprising what can be done by a week in bed, at the same time using gentle massage over the back, the buttocks, the upper portion of the thighs and the abdomen.

Practice in breathing is desirable as some of these patients have forgotten how to use the muscles of the chest in this function. They have allowed the diaphragm to do all the work and hence have become dependent upon abdominal breathing. Rest alone will not do the trick, neither will a brace, nor an abdominal or back brace, as either of these alone may be weakening. The objective, of course, is to strengthen all the muscles that have to do with posture. With the correct adjustment of balance 75 per cent at least of all back pain will disappear.

Bony Changes.

On pressing firmly on the bones of the spinal column—felt just beneath the skin—almost any one will show some tender spot. This does not mean necessarily that a vertebra is dislocated, twisted, or diseased. If absorption of bone has taken place the X-ray will disclose the fact with accuracy. Every one with a long continued backache will show some soreness on pressure. Occasionally a deformity will be found: tuberculosis may have involved the spine, or there may be a mild arthritis. This latter condition presents a specific problem and the case must be managed by seeking the source of infection and removing it. With good planning we can raise the level of body resistance and stop the progress of the bony changes in the spinal column.

In our search for the cause of back pain we must not forget disease of the rectum, foot difficulties, pelvic disease in women, and prostate enlargement in men. But let us think of posture first.

Teachers Need Freedom From Village Censorship Of Their Personal Affairs

By Malvina Lindsay.
Woman's Page Editor.

THE "old lady next door" is still bossing the schoolmarm far more than is generally supposed, a recent survey of teachers' contracts made by the National Education Association has revealed.

* * * *

"It is unlikely that any group of high school students would submit to regulations formulated by certain school boards for their teachers," says Donald DuShane, chairman of the survey committee. Mr. DuShane reports that in two-thirds of 400 teachers' contracts examined in 42 States the teachers must promise to obey whatever regulations the local school board sees fit to enforce.

In small towns and rural communities this frequently means that teachers must abstain from card playing, dancing and almost any social activity outside of church affairs. Tennessee has a State law forbidding teachers to smoke. Many communities forbid the employment of married teachers.

Mrs. Grundy on Job.

THE PUBLIC is familiar with the recent widely publicized efforts of demagogues and fanatical patriots to regiment teachers' minds and suppress academic freedom. But it will come as a surprise to many to learn that teachers' personal lives are still so largely subject to petty village meddling. That sort of thing was popularly supposed to have vanished a generation ago.

* * * *

Women teachers, much more than men, have suffered from this meddlesome attitude on the part of the public. Not only do they constitute the bulk of the teaching profession, but they have always been special subjects for criticism and regulation by parents, pupils, school boards and Mrs. Grundys. While the famous contract signed by certain North Carolina teachers in which they pledged themselves to sleep eight hours each night, eat carefully, not to fall in love and not to "go out with any young man except insofar as it may be necessary to stimulate Sunday school work" may be an extreme example, yet the spirit of such censorship has prevailed in far too many communities.

* * * *

The result has been to stifle initiative and personality on the part of the teacher and to keep out and drive from the teaching profession the persons most able to stir stagnant minds and kindle intellectual curiosity.

Petty Rules Futile.

PARENTS naturally expect that the teachers of their children represent the highest types of personality. Teachers usually do this. But if they do not, then the regulation of their skirt lengths, their dates, their married status and their personal habits is not going to graft breeding or character on to them.

* * * *

Most adults of today can remember when "Teacher's" clothes, beaux, comings and goings were on every busybody's tongue and the subject of censorship by every school board. Such conditions do not prevail now in the more enlightened communities. But that they prevail to the extent they do is not encouraging.

* * * *

A great deal is being said of recent Fascist tendencies in the United States. Social bossiness of teachers is one of the oldest and most typical examples of Fascism we have. It should no longer be tolerated. While teachers are fighting for academic freedom they demand a greater measure of personal respect and liberty.

Scarlet Fingernails Used to Bar Girls As Office Workers

Cape Town (U.P.).—Business men in Cape Town have started a war against scarlet fingernails and several advertisements for office assistants recently have specified that "no colored fingernailed girls need apply."

They declare that brilliantly daubed fingernails distract their attention when they are dictating letters, and that they are in bad taste.

They have received unexpected support from the Cape Town medical fraternity. Three women have had to be treated during recent months for finger trouble and in each case poisoning by cheap finger enamel was suspected.

Deluge of Recipes Attest Popularity of Baked Ham

Soaking and Par-Boiling Before Baking Preferred Procedure; First Prize Won by Mrs. Smith Blair.

BAKED HAM IS THE VIRGINIA housewife's favorite dish. At least, so it would seem from the deluge of excellent recipes for this delicacy entered by Virginia women last week in The Post's contest.

However, Maryland and Washington housewives also have a fondness for baked ham. The number of recipes received proved the food editor's theory that baked ham is the reigning regional dish.

It was surprising, too, to find that Maryland, Washington and Virginia women seemed to prefer the type of ham which requires soaking, par-boiling and baking, rather than the kind that can be baked without any preliminary preparation. Recipes for both kinds of ham, however, are included among the winning recipes.

The first prize, which is a large, juicy, fine flavored ham, is awarded Mrs. Smith Blair, Twentieth and Florida avenue northwest, for her recipe for baked Virginia ham. This prize will be sent to the winner. The second prize, $5, goes to Mrs. John B. Neill, Berryville, Va., for her recipe for cooking a 2-year-old Virginia ham. Third prize, $3, is awarded Mrs. E. C. Hicks, 4304 Tenth street northeast, for her recipe for baked ham. The three remaining prizes of $1 each go to Mrs. Margaret C. Hancock, La Plata, Md., for her recipe for baked ham; to Mrs. Victor Mindeleff, jr., Tomkinsville, Md., for her recipe for Southern Maryland baked ham, and to Mrs. Alice Warren, 614 Prince Edward street, Fredericksburg, Va., for her recipe for baked Virginia ham.

The recipes follow in the order given:

Baked Virginia Ham.

Soak a ham in cold water for half an hour; scrape and wash thoroughly; put it to soak in fresh water and leave for 12 hours or more. Place it in a large pot (wash boiler will do) with plenty of fresh water, several onions, a little celery, some parsley, two or three blades of mace and half a dozen cloves. At it comes to boil, swim it well, then allow it to simmer (never boil) until it turns over of its own accord in the pot (caused by the swelling of the fat changing the center of gravity). This requires about 20 minutes to each pound of ham. Set it off the fire and cool in its own water. As soon as it is cool enough to handle, place ham on a board and carefully pull off the skin, being careful not to tear the fat.

Then sprinkle a good covering of white pepper on the fat, an eighth of a pound of pepper for a medium-sized ham. Stuff it with the finest cloves, about an inch apart. Put a layer of brown sugar an inch thick on top of the peppered ham. Place the ham in a baking pan in which has been poured a pint of good sherry or cider. Place in a very slow oven so that the sugar will melt through the fat, carrying the pepper and taste of the cloves right through to the bone. Toward the end of the cooking, baste the ham with the sherry or cider and drippings until it is a rich, dark brown.

Recipe for Cooking a 2-Year-Old Virginia Ham.

Put to soak the night before in cold water; next morning wash thoroughly with warm water and soap, then rinse well. The hams on the Virginia estates are allowed to remain in the smoke houses without bags until ready to be used, therefore they must be washed. Put ham in an iron boiler if using a coal range, otherwise a large aluminum roaster, skin side down, cover with cold water if the boiler is used, but if the roaster is used half covered will be enough and allow it to simmer until the hock is loose, but not loose enough to drop out. Remove pot or roaster from stove and let ham cool in water, as this makes it much juicier. When cold, lift ham from liquor carefully and place in a large dripping pan and remove the skin. Next cover the whole surface of the ham with an egg well beaten until broken. Spread this egg over the entire surface with your bare hands; then pat in with a large spoon as much brown sugar as the egg will take—put it on thick. Next sift bread crumbs over lightly, then dot pinches of black pepper all over top about one inch apart. Put ham in oven in same pan and brown slowly. Take out when a golden brown. But this isn't all, for it is considered desecration to touch the ham until entirely cold, and then the knife must be very sharp, for the slices must be very thin if you wish to get the real flavor. When ready to slice, turn ham with the rounded side away from you and start slicing about 4 inches from hock.

This recipe is for a 15-pound ham, which is considered the average size in Virginia.

Baked Ham.

A 12-pound ham, dry-cured, hickory-smoked, aged a year, if possible. Wash and scrape well.

Soak 24 hours. Cover with a paste of flour and water thick enough to roll out. Wrap ham in cheesecloth and sew firmly. Put in boiling water and simmer over very slow heat for 3 hours. Cool in the liquor.

Remove cheesecloth, dough and skin, sprinkle brown sugar over the top, squeeze juice of 4 lemons over sugar, stick a dozen whole cloves over the surface and place ham in baking pan with 1 quart of pure apple cider. Cover and bake in moderate oven for 2 hours, basting 4 times. Lift cover the last 15 minutes for perfect browning. Serve, sliced thin.

Baked Ham.

Select a ham of the desired weight. Wipe it with a damp cloth, and place it with the skin side up in the roasting pan. Set the pan in the oven and bake until done. Allow 25 to 30 minutes per pound, using an oven temperature of 250 degrees to 350 degrees F. or a moderately slow oven. A cup of water or cider may be added at the beginning of the roasting period.

Remove the ham from the oven ¾ of an hour before it is done. Remove the skin except for the part over the shank end. Cut the fat top in crisscross fashion. Insert whole cloves at each cross section. Rub the fat with 2 tablespoons prepared mustard, then cover with a half inch layer of brown sugar and very fine bread crumbs combined in equal amounts and moistened with vinegar. Put ham back in oven and bake at moderate temperature to brown the crumb mixture.

Southern Maryland Baked Ham.

Soak a very large ham until softened. Scrub well. Make deep gashes (almost to the bone) lengthwise of the ham, about 3 inches apart, but do not carry them too close to the ends. Force into these gashes, as tightly as possible, the dressing, or stuffing. Then sew the ham up in a tight casing of cloth and cook until done. Old country hams need to be simmered (after boiling starts) 20 minutes per pound. Let ham get almost cold in liquor. Remove casing, skin and trim well. Then cover with bread crumbs mixed with brown sugar and spices, first having brushed the ham over with beaten egg. Cloves are not used with this ham as decoration. If, after removing the cloth, the ham shows a tendency to open up along the gashes, narrow bands of cloth may be tied around it while the baking process goes on. Ham should be baked about one hour, slowly, and basted meanwhile with water and vinegar, or plain cider.

Stuffing.

Pick over and mash well either young kale, spinach, cabbage or cress. Chop fine. To 3 pounds of "greens" use two onions, one stalk of celery and one button of garlic. These should be chopped with the greens. Then season highly with red pepper, one teaspoon dry mustard and one teaspoon celery seed.

Put ham cakes between two slices and arrange in baking dish. Sprinkle with brown sugar. Bake, basting frequently. Tooth picks will help hold the hamettes together, but don't forget to remove them before taking the dish; parsley garnished, to the table. Leisure as Much a Duty as Homemaking

Personal Time Often Forgotten in Striving for Ideal Home.

By Dorothea Duncan.
Post Home Economics Editor.

LEISURE is something that the housewife forgets about especially after the first baby arrives. Her days and nights are filled with the routine demands of heating bottles, straining vegetables, washing small garments and wheeling the perambulator, plus all the other daily tasks of housekeeping.

In her desire to triumph as an ideal mother and wife, many a woman forgets her personal right to leisure. Until the family is well on its way to adult independence this woman gives all her time to her children and husband, forgetting that she would have a more joyous existence if she had kept but one afternoon a week in which to indulge her own whims and fancies.

It seems startling, but it is true, that there are women right here in Washington who do not know what to do with their newly found leisure. These women have been ideal wives and mothers. For the last 20-odd years they have devoted all their time to husbands and children. And now that their children are working or married and living away from home, they find that time hangs heavily upon their hands and they cannot happily cope with the situation. They have forgotten completely how to live for themselves. This is the greatest tragedy that can happen to a woman. It could have been averted if careful planning of household tasks had left at least one free afternoon or evening a week in which to develop personal interests.

Every woman will have her own interpretation of what leisure means to her. Individual ideas on the subject lead from one extreme to another. Doctors have confessed that they are constantly amazed when busy housewives come to them and say that they feel that the need more exercise. To the man who realizes how many times during the course of the day a woman runs from cellar to attic, it doesn't seem possible that leisure which entails any physical strain would be relaxation. But it is for some. So if this is your idea of self-amusement, plan that one afternoon away from the family batting a tennis ball about the court or knocking a golf ball about the links.

What appeals to one woman as leisure well spent will not always be approved by another. Perhaps the neighbor on your right spends her free afternoon playing bridge, and the neighbor on your left attacks every bargain counter in town and then slumps into a seat in the nearest movie, either of which would be a perfect bore to you. But your delight may be in your gardening, the new sweater pattern that you are learning from the knitting shop proprietress around the corner, or your weekly trips to the gallery of modern art.

The housewife's problem, then, is not one of how to spend leisure but how to make it. Every woman should remember that at least one afternoon a week should be hers to do with as she chooses. Get away from your own four walls if it is but to go to a moving picture.

If you like to read don't sit in a stuffy corner of your living room, but take your book to a grassy nook by the river or to a bench in one of Washington's many attractive squares.

There is no city in the country that is so full of interesting things to be seen and done during leisure hours as Washington. No doubt half the women who have lived in Washington all their lives have not ascended Washington's Monument, nor visited the Capitol, the seeing Washington, exploring places that you have passed on the out-White House, or many of the other beautiful public buildings. Just side for years, should make an interesting event of your first few afternoons of leisure.

Wide Spice Supply Is Sign of Good Food

The first grocery order which the new home maker gives is usually a pretty good index of her ability as a housewife and as a cook. If among her staples she includes a complete set of spices the bridegroom, and maybe even the in-laws, will be convinced that meals in the new home are going to be real events.

Spices are not luxuries but essentials of cookery, and the well equipped kitchen will include black and white ground pepper for meats and sauces; whole peppers for soups and stews, whole cloves for the baked ham and stewed fruits; powdered cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg, mace, allspice and ginger for cakes, cookies and desserts.

The spice shelf should also contain stick cinnamon for puddings, and mixed spices and turmeric for pickles and relishes. Stuffing for the chicken will call for sage and thyme. Dry mustard is a medicine chest as well as a kitchen necessity, and prepared mustard will make even the wash-day soup meat taste like more.

For salad dressings there must be paprika and cayenne, and finally there is the indispensable curry powder for giving variety to meat, fish and eggs. It is a long list, even without the seed spices to use on rolls and breads, but it presages a well-fed household.

Season's Fruits Immediate Cure For Menu Blues

Blushing peaches, rosy-cheeked nectarines, smooth-skinned lemons and giant limes, cultivated blueberries as big as the end of your little finger, cantaloupes, honey dew balls and melons, and watermelon are crowding the Washington grocery stores and markets this week.

If you have the menu blues, snap out of them immediately. Treat your family to a series of delicious concoctions prepared with the fruits available now.

It is time for fresh peach pie and shortcake, blueberry cake and muffins, mixed fresh fruit cups, chilled melon balls dashed with lemon juice or lime, cooling fruited beverages and fresh fruit salads.

If you want a recipe for any of the above-mentioned dishes or any other special fruit dish to lighten summer menus Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Post, will be glad to give it to you. Merely call her—National 4200, Extension 307, or drop her a letter, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope with request.

Ginger Ale New as Flavor For Fruit Cups and Desserts

GINGER ALE is the culinary topic of the week for it has been selected as the theme of the current Post recipe contest.

Ginger ale has always been famous for the sparkling quality and zestful flavor it supplied to mixed drinks and chilled beverages, but now it has assumed even greater popularity as a cooking ingredient. Housewives have learned that ginger ale adds a pleasing flavor to fruit cups, frozen desserts and jellied salads. It is used, too, for basting hams and other meats.

The purpose of this contest, then, is to bring to light many of the new and intriguing recipes in which ginger ale plays an important role.

Cash prizes will be awarded the five best recipes submitted. The first prize will be $5, the second $3 and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

To enter the contest write out your favorite recipe using ginger ale as an important ingredient and send it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your entry in time to reach this office not later than Saturday morning.

Cruising Clothes Turn Feminine

Paris (U.P.).—Cruise clothes, along with other garments, are returning to feminine lines. The tailored jackets and mannish trousers still are used because of their practicality, but they are far more feminine in line than last season.

Navy blue and white checked wool is used for the flaring trousers of one suit. The trousers are so full that they almost have the appearance of a skirt. A white sweater with a round, turn-over neck and a navy blue wool jacket complete the costume. The jacket has broad, padded shoulders and is nipped in at the waist to follow the feminine silhouette.

'Addis Ababa' Is New Feature At Stone Villa

Red-Hot Harlem Band Part of New Act; Judging Starts in Contest.

News from Addis Ababa may be old stuff now, but putting Addis Ababa into a show at a night club is something else again. And that's what they've done at the Stone Villa. The act is known as Addis Ababa and the Ethiopians and its a red-hot Harlem band, if you should ask. Jay Corbett, late of the Shoreham, is aiding the Stone Villa's Tiny Garvin in the inn's management. Corbett has had a hand in the Shoreham's policy of lace balls, fashion shows and other attractions that have brought in the customers.

The business of selecting "Miss Capital" got under way at Chevy Chase Lake last night, with Head Judge Gene Ford busier than the proverbial cat on a tin roof. It seems it was Judge Ford's idea to have the lovely miss go to Atlantic City as "Miss Capital." This, doubtless came along with the decision to change the name of Mr. Ford's theater to the same word. In fact, the lucky maiden will be presented to the audience of the Capitol theater when the name is changed officially at formal exercises. Girls may yet enter the contest by applying to Station WOL, or at Chevy Chase Lake.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

There are at least 125 calls a day at the Archives for information relative to the 4,600,000 individual pension cases of the Government which now are neatly filed in the entire center section of three stories in the building.

Two months ago the work of transferring these files was begun and now the 72,000 "cans" are in place. And these tin boxes contain not only official records of the Government about the pensions paid, but often interesting little bits of information have been added to individual files. These cases are Uncle Sam's pension payments to all veterans except those of the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812 and the World War. All the Indian campaigns from 1815 on are recorded there through the pensions paid and in time those from the War of 1812 will be transferred to the Archives.

The Archives receives only "dead" cases, as they call them, or ones where final payments have been made. Two cases from the War of 1812 still are active cases—one where a widow receives $50 a month and the other where the daughter of a former warrior of the country gets $20 a month. The widow is Mrs. Caroline King, of East Aurora, N. Y., who will be 97 in October, and the daughter is Miss Esther Anne Hill Morgan, an invalid, who lives in Independence, Oreg. She will be 79 on her next birthday in March.

Arthur Leavitt, the custodian of these papers, says it keeps his staff busy answering questions about the various cases and hunting them out of the files. The Veterans' Administration is the most frequent caller for information, although genealogists come in flocks to find information about their ancestors or those of other people.

The old records show a fashion of bygone days, for with some of the official records are a number of hand-painted marriage licenses. Leavitt says it used to be quite the thing to do to have a hand-decorated certificate. Newspaper clippings and other personal papers are often included in the individual files.

A recent acquisition of the Achives is the records of President Hoover's food administration during the World War and the next lot of important papers expected for filing in the national warehouse of documents are those of the National Labor Relations Board from the time of its earliest beginning up to 1934.

James Lyman, of the AAA, has been elected the new secretary of the Recreational Association of the Department of Agriculture. The executive council chose him to fill a vacancy in that office.

Resolutions for presentation at the convention of the American Federation of Government Employes in Detroit next month are pouring into national headquarters. Those of most common interest to Government workers deal with shorter hours, extension of civil service and optional quarters and subsistence.

According to the by-laws, the resolutions from the various lodges to be presented at the convention must first come to the national headquarters.

Extension of civil service and classification of positions according to civil service standards are included in the great majority of the resolutions from the lodges. These are designated not only to make present jobs more secure but to pave the way for orderly promotions, it was said at the national headquarters.

"Recognition of seniority rights when employes are furloughed is another manifestation of the same attitude," said an official of the federation. "It is not surprising, too, to find interest in the Government's retirement system and in extending its protection to groups not now covered.

"The prime issue is security and then improvement in working conditions, with sentiment for the five-day week widespread."

Jerry H. Walsh and T. A. Joyce, formerly of the office of the Controller of AAA, have been switched to the office of Assistant AAA Administrator William Callender for some special work. Their former workers say their new jobs are chief and assistant chief, respectively, of procedure and co-ordinator, but Walsh says if that is so, he has not been informed of it.

Eight Government engineering experts have been formed into a committee by the National Resources Committee to do the job of getting together all the technical knowledge on the design and construction of small dams.

The Federal Government is building thousands of them over the country and other thousands are being constructed by State agencies and private individuals, but the data relating to their construction has never been co-ordinated. Now it will be and all the Government agencies which have been operating independently will pool their knowledge, efforts and data in an attempt to get something like uniform information on what to do and how to do it when it comes to building little dams and small water storage projects.

The Government's experts are R. W. Davenport, United States Geological Survey; E. C. Fortier, Bureau of Indian Affairs; Perry Fellows, WPA; C. S. Jarvis, Soil Conservation; L. A. Jones, Agricultural Engineering; T. W. Norcross, Forest Service; E. F. Preece, Park Service, and P. I. Taylor Reclamation. Thorndike Saville, of New York University Engineering School, has been called in to work with Uncle Sam's men and is the chairman of the new co-ordinating committee.

The dot-and-dash speedsters of the Department of Agriculture have a chance to get even greater speed in their notebooks for next month the graduate school of the department opens its shorthand speed classes. These are designed to develop speed in the more technical vocabularies which now sometimes stump even the best of secretaries.

To get into this ultra-speed class, a nontechnical entrance examination at 100 words a minute is required—and that isn't even considered speed. It has to be passed with an accuracy grade of at least 90 per cent in order to be able to work up to a speed of 150 words a minute or more.

Hazen to Head 'Safest Driver' Contest Judges

Winner and Alternate to Be Selected Soon From Many Entrants.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will head the board of judges appointed to select the Washington representative in the national safe driver contest, the American Automobile Association announced yesterday.

Other judges will be Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Superintendent of Police; William A. Van Duzer, traffic director; Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Edgar Morris and Oscar Coolican, of the Washington Board of Trade, and Mrs. Walter B. Frye, president of the District Congress of Parent--Teacher Associations.

The American Automobile Association, which is sponsoring the contest jointly with the C. I. T. Safety Foundation, said some outstanding safety records had already been submitted. Some entrants, it was said, have driven 25 years and more without a single accident or motor law violation.

Withi nthe next few days judges will meet to select a winner and an alternate from the list of entrants. The winning contestant will be given a free trip to a two-day "accident clinic" in New York, beginning August 31.

The preliminary selection process, it is understood, already is under way. In addition to the trip to New York, the winner will receive a year's membership in the AAA.

Hogan Denies Guilt And Demands Jury

John Hogan, 31, of 2315 First street northwest, pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial yesterday when arraigned before Police Court Judge John P. McMahon on a charge of false pretenses growing out of an alleged advertising racket.

Hogan has been held at the Ninth Precinct Station since Sunday, when Charles S. Zurhorst, an undertaker, complained Hogan attempted to sell him advertising space in a nonexistent magazine.

Zurhorst told police the man had come to his establishment Saturday and showed him a contract for a quarter-page advertisement in the "District Guide of Washington." Zurhorst said the contract had his name forged to it.

14 From D. C. Masonic Home Guests at Outing on Potomac

Worshipful Masters' Association of 1936 Gives Party at Colton's Point for Group, Oldest Member of Which Is 90.

Fourteen men from the Masonic and Eastern Star Home of the District of Columbia arose at dawn yesterday, climbed into ten automobiles and travelled through southern Maryland to Colton's Point, where the Potomac begins to broaden into the bay and the fish bite better.

The 14 men—the oldest was 90—were guests for a day of the Worshipful Masters Association of 1936, an organization composed of the highest officials of the Grand Lodge and affiliate Masonic lodges in the District.

They spent a day lolling in the shade, eating and talking and swapping tales.

They watched the younger members of the party play baseball, and watched them return from the river with long, silvery strings of fish. But the guests didn't go fishing because it was too hot.

So they sat and told tales on the lawn of the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Benson, where the outing was held.

William Thomas Hickok is the oldest. He was the champion storyteller having fished in most of the seas and played ball with the big-time players.

Hickok spent 20 years in Mexico. He was born in Washington and raised here, but he travelled in search of silver and gold.

"I've always led an outdoor life," he said. "I've fished under a banana tree in the shade and I caught . . .

"Now, you won't believe this, but I caught a whale."

The other men who were swapping stories about the art of fishing laughed heartily. They were those who didn't go to the river.

The men are among 78 adult inmates of the home. After the adventurous lives some of them have seen, they live now in comfort to contemplate the days of their youth.

Officers of the organization in charge of the outing were D. R. Hoover, treasurer; O. B. Roepke, grand master; Willard Hart, president, and Dr. J. L. Elliott, secretary.

Auto Tags Voided, Pepco Gets Order Recalled in Time

What to do in a case involving suspension of all license tags of vehicles owned by the Potomac Electric Power Co., life-line of the city's electric pulse, momentarily puzzled the Traffic Bureau yesterday.

An order came from the office of the Director of Traffic to suspend validity of all tags, registration cards and operators' permits on 113 pleasure cars, 137 trucks and 17 trailers operated by Pepco.

Reason: a company truck was involved in an accident at Blair road and Eastern avenue northeast March 20, and suit was filed against the firm by Ralph Crone, of Takoma Park, Md. Under the reciprocity law, failure to pay liability of $100 within 30 days leads to suspension of tags.

When damages were awarded Crone, a check was mailed to his attorney in July. A clerk allowed the case to take routine course, and company tag numbers were sent to the Traffic Bureau for suspension.

Word of the impending action reached Pepco attorneys, they notified Traffic Director William Van Duzer, and the suspension order was revoked just in the nick of time.

Levin will present Miss Edwina Eustis, contraltó, of Philadelphia, as soloist.

Seal Is Named As Successor To Prettyman

Selected After Pressure From White House and Committee.

Backed by Senator Glass, He Wins Appointment Oevr Roberts.

Yielding to pressure from the White House and the Democratic National Committee, the District Commissioners yesterday appointed Elwood H. Seal corporation counsel to fill a vacancy created last March by the resignation of E. Barrett Prettyman.

The appointment was recommended by Commissioner George E. Allen, to whom the corporation counsel's office is assigned, although he indicated he would have named Richmond B. Keech, acting chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, had this not been a political campaign year. Keech, however, was not a candidate.

Seal, who has been an assistant corporation counsel for five years, won the appointment over People's Counsel William A. Roberts in a political tug-of-war between Senators Glass, of Virginia, and King, of Utah.

Senator Glass, who is chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, was sponsor for Seal, a native of Lexington, Va., and it is understood that the White House gave the word which brought about the appointment with the explanation that the President wished to please Glass.

Indorsed by King.

Roberts had the indorsement of both King, who is chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representative Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, and many civic organizations.

Last night Seal was hurrying to Washington from Ocean City, Md., where he has been vacationing, and he is expected to take office today. His appointment will create a vacancy among th assistant corporation counsel.

Seal, who is 42 years old, came to Washington in 1915 after obtaining an education in the public schools at Lexington, Va., and at Washington and Lee University.

He was employed for a short time by John H. Magruder, retail grocer, and later by B. B. Earnshaw & Brothers, wholesale grocers. In 1916 he became associated with the Washington office of Bird & Son, Inc.

Enlisted in Navy.

In 1917 Seal enlisted as a yeoman in the United States Navy, and in 1918 he was promoted to the rank of ensign in the supply corps, serving as supply officer aboard the U. S. S. West Mahomet.

After the war he returned to Washington and served as administrative assistant in the U. S. Public Health Service for three years. Georgetown University Law School, during which time he attended He was graduated with an LL.B. degree in 1922, and admitted to the bar the same year.

He immediately became associated with the law firm of Douglas, Obear & Douglas, but in 1924, he founded the firm of Seal, Dice, Fordel & McCuen. Besides being a member of the several courts in this jurisdiction he hold a license to practice law in Virginia.

First appointed assistant corporation counsel in 1927, he returned to private practice in 1928. In 1932 he was reappointed and was placed in charge of the loan shark drive then beginning.

Investigated Dairy Sales.

In 1933 he was selected by the sub-committee of the Senate District Committee investigating the sale and distribution of dairy products in Washington. Since 1934, he has been in charge of the defense of most major District damage cases. He has been chief legal adviser of the District Unemployment Compensation Board since its creation, and early this year he was named chairman of the Fire Trial Board.

Headquarters Of LandonClub Opened in D. C.

Bureau to Serve Purpose of State Committee; Plea Is Issued.

Functioning under the auspices of the official Republican State Committee of the District of Columbia, the Landon and Knox Republican Club yesterday opened its permanent headquarters at 1413 H street northwest.

This bureau will handle all activities incumbent on the State committee, including an absentee voters' bureau, a speakers' bureau, the membership committee of the club and publicity.

The slogan of the national committee and the club will be "Full speed ahead," Chairman John Hamilton has stated. He expects the club to have one of the largest memberships in the country.

Samuel J. Prescott, former chairman of the State committee and chairman of the National Capital Republican Club, yesterday said:

"Every Republican resident in Washington should join the Landon and Knox Campaign Club, if this is at all possible.

"The club finances the campaign in the District. We should have United action in this matter, for it is only through concerted effort on the part of every Republican that we can put Landon and Knox across."

Franklin Park's Squirrels to Fall Off Wagon Today

Franklin Park's squirrels, which for several weeks have been "on the wagon" against their will, will go back to drink today.

At any rate, the office of National Capital Parks promised as much yesterday after being informed by The Post of numerous complaints by animal lovers that squirrels in the downtown park were suffering from thirst.

Formerly the wild pets' water supply was the bird baths, which were abolished in connection with Franklin Park's recent remodeling program. The change calls for a large fountain, which will solve the squirrels' problem, but it will be some time until the fixture is completed.

Meanwhile, parks officials said yesterday, steps will be taken to provide the square's thirsty tenants with temporary drinking fountains.

Woman Robbed By Bandit Here As Child Plays

Maid Slugged by Masked Gunman, Who Escapes With $13 in Loot.

While 15-month-old Gerald Robinson playe unconcernedly, a masked gunman held his aunt, Norena Todd, in a room of an apartment at 1422 N street northwest, bound and gagged a colored maid and escaped with $13.

Miss Todd told the police she was dressing in one room of the apartment when the door was opened slightly and a hand shoved a revolver through. A voice commanded her to "keep still."

The bandit then struck Mary Johnson, the maid, bound her hands and feet and threw her in a closet. He took the money from Miss Todd's pocketbook and escaped.

Miss Todd, who is 24, shares the apartment with her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Noland Robinson.

Meanwhile, the police were searching for a colored bandit who was frightened from a store at 531 Twenty-third street northwest by Lawrence Shub, 16, who faced the bandit, who was holding a knife, with his father's pistol.

Mrs. Shub said she left her son in the store Monday night for about 10 minutes. The robber entered and asked for a can of salmon. When Lawrence returned with the can the man threatened him with a knife. Lawrence reached under a counter and got the gun. The bandit fled.

Dr. Ostrow Takes City Dental Post

Assuming a new office created by the last Congress, Dr. A. Harry Ostrow, Washington dentist, was sworn in Friday as dental supervisor of the Health Department in the District Building.

Dr. Ostrow will have charge of all dental clinics in the Washington public schools. For the last six years he has been with the Health Department clinic in Raymond School on Spring Road.

Distributors Oppose Rise In Milk Price

Health Officer Ruhland Advised There Is No Shortage Here.

AAA Allows More Time for Filing Briefs on 'Agreement.'

Further testimony that there is no reason for an increase in retail milk prices was given yesterday by spokesmen for the eight local distributors in a conference with Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

The dairy representatives said that they did not anticipate any shortage in the milk supply before October 1. Beyond that time they could not predict as weather conditions within the next two months would play an important role.

At the same time the Agricultural Adjustment Administration allowed additional time for the filing of briefs on the proposed milk marketing agreement for this area. Producers at the AAA hearing on this proposal had predicted that an increase of a cent per quart in milk prices would be necessary because of drought conditions in Maryland and Virginia.

Retail dealers yesterday confirmed the reports of District milk inspectors that the milk shed had not suffered from a drought and that there is a surplus of from 10 to 15 per cent in the milk supply on the local market now.

Dr. Ruhland plans to discuss the threatened milk price increase with the producers in the near future.

Present at yesterday's parley were:

D. I. Hunt, Highland Farms Dairy; Julius Marcey and Frank Davis, Arlington County Dairy; Henry and A. L. Thompson, Thompson's Dairy; P. D. Piddes and Percy D. Lebro, Model Farms Dairy; Sefton Darr, Fairfax Dairy; James J. Ward and Robert E. Lynch, Embassy Dairy; E. F. Brawner and N. V. Davison, Chestnut Farms and Chevy Chase Dairy, and Philip A. Simpson, Wakefield Dairy.

Missing Cabman Is Reported Seen

Police yesterday were investigating a tip that Charles L. Miller, 44-year-old taxicab driver and former contractor missing from his home for a week, has been seen driving a cab for a different firm.

Meanwhile, Charles L. Miller, jr., son of the missing man, who celebrated his birthday last Friday, received a $5 bill from an anonymous donor through a newspaper.

"Tell her I said thanks," Charles said, at his home at 3008 Twentieth street northeast.

Miller was last seen when he discharged a passenger at Sister's College in Catholic University grounds last week. Police and Boy Scouts combed the woods in the vicinity of the college in an effort to find him.

Owens Seeks Third Olympic Crown Today in 200-Meter Field

Thrill Marks Broad Jump Triumph

Negro Breaks Record on Final Leap After German Ties Him.

Lowers Olympic Mark Twice in 200-Meter Trial Heats.

By the United Press.

Olympic Stadium, Berlin, Aug. 4. The proud owner of two Olympic titles which helped to assure America the track championship, Jesse Owens tomorrow will sprint down the 200-meter straightaway in an attempt to ascend the victor's platform for a third time.

Having made good on two-thirds of his promise of a triple Olympic victory by his triumps in the 100-meters and the broad-jump, the dusky Owens is now a favorite to become the first athlete since Paavo Nurmi in 1924 to achieve three Olympic titles.

Owens, the lithe, sepia-tinted Negro who was born in the cotton fields of Alabama, again was America's hero.

Cracks Record 5 Times.

Racing down the runway, Owens took off to a flying leap, pulled his legs up under him like the retractable landing gear on a plane and soared to a new Olympic record of 26 feet 5 21/64 inches in the broad jump. Five times during the day he cracked the former Olympic broad jump record of 25 feet 4⅜ inches set in 1928 at Amsterdam by Eddie Hamm, Georgia Tech star.

Owens' last leap in the broad jump surpassed the former world record of 26 feet 2⅛ inches set by Chuhei Nambu, Japan, at Tokyo, October 27, 1931, and which had existed until Owens himself topped it with a leap of 26 feet 8¼ inches at Ann Arbor, Mich., May 25, 1935. Owens' mark was officially accepted as a world record by the International Amateur Athletic Federation last Friday.

The next to last leap made by Owens was the most dramatic moment thus far from an American standpoint. The 170-pound Negro apparently had won the title with a leap of 25 feet 9 27-32 inches only to have Luz Long, of Germany, take off on the second of his last three jumps and tie him to the fraction of an inch. When Long's jump was announced, Owens rushed over to his German rival and gave him a hearty handshake.

Then Jesse, really warmed up to his task, soared to 26 feet 5 21-64 inches on his final leap amid the cheers of the partisan crowd who are beginning to realize that they are watching one of the greatest athletes in all track and field history. The two German weitprungers (broadjumpers), Long and Wilhelm Leichum, both rushed over to Owens and shook hands with the Negro and patted his back while the crowd roared approval.

Betters 200 Mark Twice.

Jumping wasn't Owens' only feat today. His feats in the broad jump pit, however, relegated his speed over the cinderpath temporarily into the background. Twice Jesse broke the Olympic 200-meter record by winning his first heat in 21.1 and duplicating the performance in the quarter-final. For an ordinary athlete, Owens' speed in the 200 meters would have been a big day. But for Jesse it was just incidental, while he leaped to the broad jump title.

Pictured in the act of setting a new Olympic broad jump record of 26 feet 5 and 21/64 inches at Berlin yesterday is Jesse Owens, the Ohio State star, who won the event for the United States. Owens eclipsed the record set by Edward Hamm, of the United States in 1926, by more than a foot.

Jesse Owens (pictured saluting) takes his place on the winner's platform in the Berlin Olympiad after capturing the broad jump title for the United States. To the rear of Owens is Ralph Metcalfe, who finished second in the event. In front of Owens is Naoto Tajima, of Japan, who finished third.

Owens Sets World Broad Jump, Olympic 200 Mark as U. S. Sweeps All Men's Track Events

the day's usual shower but Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and another capacity crowd of 100,000 jammed the big concrete stadium most of the day with Owens the main magnet.

Der Fuehrer joined in terrific applause accorded the American ace whose performances now have thrilled upward of 300,000 spectators three straight days and has given the Olympic games their most outstanding individual performer since Paavo Nurmi's exploits of 1924, when the "Phantom Finn" won three gold medals.

Woodruff brought to a climax an amazing rise from the ranks of the unknowns scarcely two months ago by capturing the none-too-well-run 800-meter final. Ted Meredith, who last won this event for America in 1912, looked on as the long-striding Negro freshman from the University of Pittsburgh bucked and jumped his way out of a series of jams and nailed his dusky rival, Phil Edwards, of Canada, at the head of the stretch and swept on to victory over Mario Lanzi, of Italy.

Woodruff's time of 1:52.9 was slower than his clocking in the semifinals and the slowest winning time since 1920, but there was no question that the American Negro was the best man in the race.

Reversing his tactics of the previous day, when he burned up the track during the first 400 meters, Woodruff paced the first lap in 57.4 seconds and then fought off Edwards as well as Lanzi and Kazimierz Kucharski, of Poland, in the last rough 300 meters.

Four Negro Titlists.

Edwards shot into the front of the backstretch, followed up by the Italian and the Pole. Thus Woodruff was boxed by the trio. The Negro half-tripped getting loose and simply ran around his rivals into the stretch for the last 40-meter dash.

Charles (Chuck) Hornbostel, bespectacled Evansville, Ind., veteran, much to the surprise of the American camp, lacked his usual finishing kick and took fifth as Harry Williamson, of High Point, N. C., finished sixth in the erratically run race.

Woodruff's triumph marked the fourth contributed by Negroes to America's total of five championships and likewise ended Great Britain's post-war winning streak in this event. Brian McCabe, lone British finalist, ran eighth.

Hardin Only White Titlist.

The Negro monopoly on the medals was broken by Hardin, who came through as was expected but not without a stretch struggle in which the first four were separated by scarcely 5 meters.

The Mississippian, who was voted the most handsome man on the American team, found the gusty arena unsuitable for his best performance and was timed in 52.4 seconds, considerably slower than his Olympic and world marks of 52 and 50.6 seconds, but he proved his class under pressure.

A stretch drive over the last 40 yards decided the issue after Johnny Loaring, of Canada; Miguel White, of the Philippines, and Joe Patterson, of Oklahoma City, pressed Hardin over the last hurdle.

200 Mark Tied 3 Times.

Patterson was virtually level with his teammate at that point but faltered and was passed by Loaring and White who finished two and three meters, respectively behind the winner.

Dale Schofield, of Provo, Utah, lost out in the semifinals as the result of a "photo finish" in which Christos Mandikas, of Greece, gained the third qualifying place by plunging to the track full length in the heat won by Hardin.

The Olympic 200-meter mark of 21.2 seconds set by Eddie Tolan in 1932, was equaled three times besides being beaten twice by Owens first in the trials and then in the quarter-finals. Packard tied it in the morning but ran third in the Orr, who matched the mark, and afternoon, trailing Canada's Lee a blanket finish, all three being separated by only one-tenth of a second. Robinson equalled the record in the last quarter-final heat, also Paul Haenni, of Switzerland, in beating the Dutch star, Martin Osendarp.

Favorite Women Win.

Favorites came through in both events. Miss Stephens, who outclassed all rivals throughout the 100-meter competition, was a trifle slow off the marks but gained her stride and pulled out quickly to beat Miss Walsh by two meters, Kaethe Krauss, of Germany, by four, with Marie Dollinger, of Germany, and Annette Rogers, of Chicago, fourth and fifth, respectively.

Fraulein Mauermeyer, claimant of the new world record, added over seven meters to the Olympic women's discus record with a winning throw of 47.63 meters (156 feet 3⅜ inches). Jadwiga Wajsowan, of Poland, the listed world record holder, also bettered the former mark with a throw of 46.22 meters (151 feet 7 23-32 inches), and alone challenged the German girl while the Americans were outclassed. Miss Stephens' best effort was 111 feet 8 58-64 inches and she didn't appear to have her mind on the day's extra work.

Zamperini's stretch rush, in which he barely collared the Italian, Salvatore Mastroienni in the last stride, gained the fifth and last qualifying place in the final heat in the 5,000-meter trials.

The Torrance, Calif., schoolboy paced the first few laps and then dropped far back and looked completely out of it with a 15-meter deficit entering the stretch, where he suddenly unleashed a sensational sprint.

John Henry Johnson, of Sweden, won the heat in 0:14.54, the fastest of three trials, Withkohei Murakoso, of Japan, second, and Lauri Lehtinen, of Finland, the defending champion, an unimpressive fourth.

Gunnar Hoeckert, winner of the second heat, appeared Finland's best bet, although Ilmari Salminen, Finland's 10,000-meter champion, also qualified.

3 Nat Errors Give A's Four Runs, 5-3 Victory

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Philadelphia's Athletics, who have been getting a worm's-eye view of the American League proceedings all season, turned on the Nats yesterday and won a ball game, their second victory in 12 starts against Washington this season.

At that, to be really truthful about it, the A's didn't exactly win the game. It was flung into their laps by the shoddy play of the Nats in the first two innings. The score, 5-3; the reason, three unpardonable errors by the Nats behind Monte Weaver at the outset of the contest.

Weaver had a fine case of nonsupport against his infield in those first two innings. Buddy Lewis couldn't find a meek grounder for throwing purposes, Catchers Alec Sabo and Walter Millies threw the ball around with no sense of direction whatsoever, Shortstop Cecil Travis muffed a ball that was begging to be caught, and Weaver found himself behind, 5-0, at the end of two innings.

Four of the A's five runs were as unearned as a foundling's fate, but there was also the small item of the Nats' own futility at bat. Off Gordon Rhodes and Gordon Fink, the Nats accumulated only six hits and were able to come up with only one run in the last seven innings—Johnny Stone's twelfth homer.

With Rhodes and Fink frustrating the Nats, Joe Cascarella's superb relief pitching was wasted. Cascarella held the A's to four hits and no runs after taking up his pitching duties in the third inning.

Trailing, 5 to 3, in the eighth inning, the Nats put the tying runs on base wth one out, but Connie Mack withdrew Rhodes in favor of Fink and the uprising fizzled. Chapman had drawn a walk, Miles had fouled out and Kuhel had singled when Rhodes left the scene. In came Fink 1 dispose of Stone on a fly to right and Travis on a grounder to Niemic.

Nats Err Early.

With two out in the ninth, Pinch Hitter Carl Reynolds delayed the exit of the fans by beating out a slow tap to Higgins, but for some reason Pinch Hitter Jess Hill attempted a bunt and Fink threw him out to seal the A's victory.

On the very first play of the game the Nats started their suicidal play. Buddy Lewis muffed Fin-

Cards Defeat Cubs, 6 to 1; Gain Lead

Mize's Homer Feature of Victory; Davis Bows After Losing Control.

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Frankie Frisch's "gas house gang" from St. Louis, led by Johnny Mize, loosed a 12-hit blast at Curt Davis today and roared into first place in the National League by a 6-to-1 triumph over the Cubs.

A Tuesday crowd of 22,000, lured out for the opening battle of the important series, saw Davis choke the Cardinals off with three hits and no runs in six innings, only to take a terrific lacing in the last three frames. The Cubs, who started the series with a margin of just two percentage points over St. Louis, dropped back a full game behind the Cards.

Dancing Doll, $9.60, Wins Suffolk Downs Feature by Length

Abbott Filly Wins From Bien Fait

Track Record Equalled by Manners Mild at Washington Park.

Suffolk Downs, Boston, Aug. 4. In a four-horse race which saw the first flight roll down the stretch as a wave, Mrs. A. W. Abbott's Dancing Doll drove to a length victory over the pace-setting Bien Fait, from the Corsicana Stable, to pay $9.60, while being timed in 1:11.2 for the 6 furlongs of the Brockton Purse before $15,000. Mrs. H. Teller Archibald's Candy Prince was a close third, a neck off the pacesetter and a head in front of A. C. Bostwick's Upside Down. Bien Fait paid $4 for place and Candy Prince returned $3.20 for show.

Bien Fait and Dancing Doll were away together, but going to the first turn the former had a slight lead, which he managed to hold until the field straightened away from home.

Candy Prince and Upside Down, that had been sluggish in getting away, joined the first flight and it was a merry battle all the way home, with the winner finally attaining a slight supremacy inside of the sixteenth pole.

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Manners Man, owned by W. D. Butler, of Hollywood, Calif., equalled the track record of 1:11 for 6 furlongs today to win the featured event at Washington Park.

Jockey R. Dotter sent Manners Man to the front at the start and did some vigorous riding to withstand a lively closing rush by the favorite, G. H. Marlman's Danise M., which finished a half length back. G. H. Emick's Recovery was third.

Overlooked in the wagering, Manners Man rewarded his backers with $9.20 for $2 straight.

Nats Trounced By Mackmen, 5-3

ney's slow grounder, Finney stole second on Millies' poor throw, and then was trapped between second and third by Millies after a pitchout, but regained second safely when Millies, for no reason at all, threw to third.

Stone Gets Homer.

At this point, Millies complained of a sore shoulder and was withdrawn in favor of the Rookie Sabo who finished off the Nats' determined attempt to give the A's a run. Fielding Moses' grounder in front of the plate, Sabo threw the ball over Kuhel's head and Finney scored.

Without warning, the A's piled up four more runs in the second. With two out, Niemic, Rhodes and Finney rapped out singles, Moses walked and Travis muffed Dean's grounder as the second run of the inning scored. Johnson drove in the other two with a single to center.

The Nats got back into the ball game in the second when Travis walked, Lewis beat out a bunt, Bluege singled one run home and another scored while Sabo was hitting into a double play, but Stone's wallop over the right-field fence in the sixth was the only thing they could do in a scoring way after that.

DUSKY MISS was hustled to the front at the close of the opening three-sixteenths drive, away into a good lead and dominated the running throughout. TOOTHPICK, unable to keep pace early, closed in determined fashion under intermittent punishment. TRAITRESS, far back early, closed a big rap. GEOLOGIST, prominent from the outset, was unable to improve his position in the closing drive. CORE, hard ridden while holding to a forward position, was unable to make up any ground throughout the stretch run. SCOTCH BOY was prominent until reaching the stretch, dropping back through the last three-sixteenths. DIRECT moved up briefly leaving the backstretch. MOLASSES BOB was outrun. RIELTHING, on the outside all the way, dropped back in the last quarter mile. MISS PECAN had early speed though stopping badly.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:57. Off at 3:00. Winner, Miss L. C. White's ch. f. GOOD OMEN went to the front in the opening strides, drew into a good lead and rated along in front under steadying restraint, was never threatened. MISS TROPHY raced along in closest pursuit of the winner from practically the outset. INFINATA was prominently placed all the way though unable to reach the first two in the stretch run. PAUL JUNIOR saved ground throughout, weakening in the last three-sixteenths. SKIPTON, under about restraint while racing on the outside down the backstretch, moved up when reaching the stretch and was taken in hand the last 70 yards. He will undoubtedly show improvement over this outing. OLD VETERAN was never a threat racing far back all the way.

NOTICE ME, well placed all the way, took command when STROLLING HOME began tiring and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to stave off the bid of the winner. DISCOURSE, forwardly placed from the beginning, was unable to reach the leaders under punishment. BAY HERO, taken in hand after gaining a position in the run down the backstretch, was unable to make up any appreciable amount of ground when called upon. DEEP RUN never could endanger the leaders. BUSBY never was prominent. LIGHTHEELED was outrun throughout. SIGHTING BAR had to be taken up in the first furlong when he ran up on the heels of hroses.

LADY BEWITHUS, away fast, had LUCY GLITTERS in close quarters in the run down the backstretch, drew clear when the latter was eased back and hard ridden at the end, lasted. LUCY GLITTERS, prominent all the way, was eased back and taken to the outside, moved up threateningly though not good enough in the closing test. QUEEN FULL, outraced early, came steadily in the last quarter mile. BRAVE AGNES never could reach the leaders. GREY SHOT faltered in the stretch run. CONSERVATIVE was never a factor. STORY TIME tired.

DANCING DOLL was steadied along, began moving up on the outside leaving the backstretch and holding to a position well out in the track, closed with a rush and was going away at the end. BEIN FAIT displayed good speed after taking the lead in the opening stride and while unable to cope with the bid of the winner, fought it out with splendid courage. CANDY PRINCE forced the early pace, moved up determinedly when straightened out for the stretch run and finished with good energy. UPSIDE DOWN moved through on the inside, made a game but unavailable effort to reach the leaders nearing the stretch and though not good enough, fought it out determinedly. BLACK BUDDY, away slowly, closed home ground. The others were unable to keep up.

RONFALON, prominently placed from the outset, was taken to the outside in the stretch, closed with a rush and was up in the closing stride. STILL ALARM worked his way up steadily, came through on the inside and getting in the clear outside the last 50 yards, just failed to last. BYRDEX moved up fast in the run down the backstretch, took command when BUNNY MARTIN began tiring, drew clear, though unable to keep pace when challenged in the closing stages. BUNNY MARTIN showed good speed in pacemaking, faltering in the last three-sixteenths. TONEY BOY tired. THUMBS DOWN was never able to reach the leaders, FIRST BID was away slowly and far back throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—On and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:34. Off at 5:35½. Winner, Miss A. Doris' b. m. FLYING DERE, rated along under steadying restraint while within striking distance of the pace, wore down GOLDEN SEPTRE inside the last furlong and drew out fast in the closing sixteenth. GOLDEN SEPTRE took command at once, was rated along under steadying restraint and held on well to the end, though no match for the winner in the closing issue. COHORT MISS moved through on the inside and closed with good energy. THE MAULER moved up threateningly, swung from the backstretch, though unable to keep pace when the closing test came. POCKET faltered after forcing the pace. GRANDPA'S BOY was never formidable. AUKAI was outrun all the way.

LONGBIT, away in a tangle, was hustled into contention and closed gamely, though never able to endanger the leaders. BLACKMAIL forced the early pace, though weakening in the last three-sixteenths. Lott Victor Over Latona in Middle-Atlantic Singles Net Play

Favorites Win In All Other Matches

Nate Ritzenberg Loses; Stan McCaskey Bows to Lieut. McCue.

By John R. Vosburgh.

One jump ahead of the rest of the field, young Hunter Lott, of Philadelphia, stormed into the quarter-finals of the Middle Atlantic tennis championships yesterday at the Edgemoor Club behind a booming service which blasted Tony Latona out of the tournament in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4.

Washington's No. 5 seeded player was more or less helpless before the terrific delivery of the 6-foot 4-inch Philadelphian, who justified his No. 1 rating to the complete satisfaction of the most skeptical observers.

One of the finest matches Washington has seen in many years began taking shape with Lott's victory, for Gilbert Hunt, the young Washington ace, was simultaneously going into the fourth round with a 6—4, 6—1 victory over 15-year-old Davie Johnsen. Hunt and Lott will meet Friday in the quarter-finals, providing Hunt gets past 190-pound Herb Shenkin tomorrow. Hunt is seeded No. 2 in the Washington list.

Latona Is Only Upset.

Latona was the only seeded player to lose yesterday. Frank Goeltz, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., seeded No. 3 among the visiting players, eliminated Nate Ritzenberg, Washington's Public Parks champion, 6-3, 6-4. Lieut. John McCue, of Annapolis, second seeded out-of-towner, halted stocky Stan McCaskey in another third-round match, 4-6, 6-2, 6-0, and Edward O. Mather, former doubles partner of National Champion Wilmer Allison, swept into the fourth round with a 6-1, 6-0 win over Ray Sherfy. Mather is seeded No. 6 in the Washington ratings.

Dooley Mitchell, No. 1 seeded man in the Washington list, turned in an impressive, 6-3, 6-4 win over Tom Moorhead, of the Chevy Chase Club, and faces the veteran Pat Deck today in the third round.

GroveDrops 1st Game to Yanks Since '34

New York Throws Jinx, 4-2, as Ruffing Baffles Boston Red Sox.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 4.—For the first time since 1934, the New York Yankees today overcame their "Lefty Grove jinx" and nosed out the Red Sox, 4 to 2, although held to seven hits by the lean southpaw.

Jimmy Foxx belted his thirty-first homer in the seventh, and doubled in the ninth and scored on Johnny Kroner's single for Boston's only runs as Charley Ruffing chalked up his fifteenth hurling victory against seven defeats by holding the Sox to nine hits.

It was the first time in two seasons the Yanks have put a defeat in Grove's record, and marked his seventh setback of this year, compared to 13 victories.

Powell Singles.

Two 2-run clusters accounted for all the Yanks' runs. In the sixth, Lou Gehrig walked with two out and scored on Bill Dickey's double. Powell's single brought Dickey in. In the eighth, singles by Don Heffner, playing third base in place of the injured Red Rolfe, and Joe DiMaggio, Gehrig's sacrifice, and Dickey's single counted the other two runs.

The Sox made a strong threat in the ninth, when with one run in, a man was on first and none were out, but Frank Crosetti fielded Eric McNair's ground perfectly and doubled Johnny Kroner off first to end the threat. If he hadn't, things might have been different, for Rick Ferrell, next Boston batter, doubled.

With today's victory, the Yanks have won 18 of 23 starts on the current road trip.

Out Fishin' . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Fishing at Solomons Island is now at its peak and will continue for the remainder of the season. Maj. Gordon M. Wells, Messrs. Hulbert, Robb, Valatis, Schooley, Brady, McCormick and Baner of the War Department, who have a standing one-day engagement through the season with Capt. Gus White, of Solomons, informs us that their low catches during the past weeks are at an end and their patience has been rewarded.

Fishing off Hoopers Island Light from to 6 to 8:30 p. m. the party landed 219 croakers, 10 beautiful trout, several spot and 1 bluefish. The largest trout weighed 4½ pounds, 1 pound heaver than the largest croaker, many of which weighed 3 pounds. Double-headers on croakers were quite common.

The above report is not unusual. Many have been received that exceed this. Many fishing resorts have requested the writer to "send anglers down here," fish are very plentiful. Evidently the trout fishing has started something after a long vigil with the croakers who seem to be in no hurry to depart from established feeding grounds.

Personally, we don't believe the croakers are going to stay much longer, regardless of their present numbers. Usually when the trout arrive the croakers make a hurried exit as do the trout when the blues arrive on their feeding grounds. But the trout are smart; they move into waters ahead of the blues, but further up the Potomac and its tributaries. No about face for these tender-mouth fish. We try to avoid repetition but believe this remark will be of value to anglers who have had little, if any, experience with salt water trout (weak fish or squeteague).

This fish is not only one of our most abundant food fishes but one of the gamest and most widely distributed sport fishes. The favorite method of taking along the coast is by surf casting. In our waters of the Chesapeake and its tributaries it is usually caught by still fishing although at times, when schooling, it can be taken by trolling.

Still fishing is the most common method used because it serves two purposes, viz, the lower hook is baited for hardheads, the upper hook for trout and bluefish.

The proper tackle to use for trout should consist of the very lightest gear possible because of the tender mouth, which is so easily torn by the hook, which leaves a slot tear large enough to cause the hook to drop out as soon as the line is slackened or the fish pulled too forcibly.

When using a hand line, remember: Once the nervous strike is felt, hand-line as fast as possible, using a hand-over-hand motion; to stop before the fish is in the boat means a lost fish; a hand line is a fish getter, we'll admit, but we don't think much of the method and it certainly isn't sporty. We make exceptions, of course, to the angler that cannot claim the possession of a rod. In his case he has no alternative, and therefore must use the familiar "clothes line."

Few anglers are wise to the fact that trout go for alewives like bluefish. Chumming for trout around Solomons Island should net some high-class results. The food of this fish varies with locality and size of fish. The smaller trout feed on crustaceans, but we have learned from experience that the big fellows go for the larger bait fishes such as spot and menhaden. Ask the boatmen around Solomons Island to let you try some chumming for trout, because we believe they will be glad to accommodate you. It also will hold bluefish in those waters if and when they arrive, which should be very soon.

Galesville, Solomons, Point Lookout; Cornehl Harbor, Broome Island, Benedict, Crisfield, Kenwood Beach and many other fishing grounds are tops for fishing at the moment. Other places will be furnished by phoning Atlantic 1926, which has been disconnected due to our vacationing among the sport fishes of the Chesapeake and Atlantic.

Policemen Hold Brewers To 5-5 Tie on Ellipse

The Heurich Brewers, who had a game scheduled for the South Ellipse, and the Metropolitan Police, who had a game scheduled for the West Ellipse, finally ended up by playing each other yesterday after their opponents had failed to show up. The Bluecoats held the Brewers to a 5-5 tie, when Cliff Keyser doubled in the seventh and scored on Campbell's single to center.

Seeded Netmen Southampton Casualties

Wood Loses to Hendrix, 6—4, 6—4, in Day's Biggest Upset.

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Three seeded players, two of them members of the first ten ranking list, found the pace too swift in the second round of the Meadow Club's forty-sixth annual Invitation Tennis Tournament.

Sidney Wood, of New York, former Wimbledon champion, and Davis Cup player, was the victim of the day's biggest upset. Fifth in the national ranking, Wood has played in only a few tournaments this year and he wasn't prepared for the kind of game Arthur Hendrix, the Lakeland, Fla., "giant killer" played against him. Wood's game collapsed completely in the face of the Southerner's steady driving, and he was beaten in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4.

Before Wood fell, Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., ranked ninth nationally and seeded seventh, came a cropper against unseeded Eugene Smith, of Los Angeles, and was eliminated by the decisive scores of 6—1, 6—2. Finally Davey Jones, of New York, seeded sixth but unranked because he has not played in this country for the last four years, lost to young Bobby Riggs, the national clay court champion from Los Angeles, 8—6, 6—1.

Jones had been a strong favorite to win with his powerful service, but the dynamite delivery went awry and with it the rest of the former Columbia star's game.

Strong Favorite.

Advancing to the quarter final round with Hendrix, Smith and Riggs were top-seeded Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., who routed Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles, 6-4, 6-3; Gil Hall, South Orange, N. J.; veteran, Charlie Harris, of Miami, Fla.; Gregory Mangin, of New York, national indoor champion and John McDiarmid, the surprising Texas who won the Seabright Tourney last week.

Hines' defeat was not entirely unexpected for he had been beaten in the first two rounds of very major tournament this summer and by his own admission was "playing the worst tennis" of his career. Smith's sharpshooting from the baseline and smart volleying made him wilder than ever.

Wood was no setup for Hendrix, who whipped Wilmer Allison and Bitsy Grant in Southern tournaments last winter, but the Floridian hung on grimly and won by sheer steadiness.

The quarter final round will be played Thursday with Parker meeting Riggs, Smith opposing Hall, Hendrix playing Harris and McDairmid playing Mangin.

Revenue Act Affects Bendix Dividends

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Bendix Aviation Corporation declared today that because of the 1936 revenue act it would no longer observe an established dividend policy. Announcing declaration of a 50-cent dividend against 25 cents paid in previous quarters, Vincent Bendix, president, pointed out that the dividend was not an increase in the regular rate "but is merely the declaration of a dividend."

"On account of the penalties imposed by the new revenue act, the policy of declaring regular dividends has been discontinued. From now on dividends will be declared from time to time in such amounts as earnings of the corporation and its financial position permit."

Russia Menaces U.S. Supremacy In Aluminum

Soviets Plan 1937 Output of 3 Times Total in This Country.

Soviet Russia challenges America's world supremacy in the aluminum industry, according to the 1933-37 report of the state planning commission of the U. S. S. R. The Russians will produce over 80,000 tons of aluminum in 1937. This is almost three times as much aluminum as is produced in the United States, and one-third more than is produced in all America, and approximately half of the entire aluminum manfactured in the world.

The American aluminum industry, which began almost 50 years ago, is founded upon a process which requires bauxite ore high in alumina and low in silica. The Russian industry, launched practically less than seven years ago, uses new methods devised by Russian scientists and known as the Mueller-Yakovin process and the Kuznetsovzhukoski process, both designed to extract the mineral from ores low in alumina and high in silica.

"Russia's astonishing endeavors to establish an enormous aluminum production industry," says C. E. Julihn, of the U. S. Bureau of Mines, centers in two plants. The Kirov Aluminum Combinat, on the Volkhov River, near Leningrad, is close to the Tikhvin bauxite deposits, Russia's main source of the mineral which makes aluminum; and the other factory, located on the Dnieper River in the Ukraine, is adjacent to a hydro-electric plant that supplies approximately 600,000 kilowatts to manufactur the metal.

Russia's amazing achievement is based on ingenuity in making use of low-grade ores and in utilizing huge resources of cheap hydroelectric power. In Russia, as in America, there are enormous deposits of low-grade bauxite, hitherto considered commercially useless. With this low-grade ore the Russians now plan to speed up production to manufacture 300,000 tons of aluminum annually. Three hundred thousand tons of aluminum will be equal to twice the quantity now manufactured by the whole world, and will be six times as much as is produced by America.

$50,000,000 Bills 3.4 Times Subscribed

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Taylor announces that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated August 5, 1936, and maturing May 5, 1937, which were offered on July 31, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total amount applied for was $169,772,000, of which $50,019,000 was accepted. The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.841, equivalent to a rate of about 0.210 per cent per annum, to 99.818, equivalent to a rate of 0.240 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

The Market By Carlton A. Shively

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Drift in Average Trading Day; Wheat and Corn Break With Rains.

New York, Aug. 4.—Stocks couldn't cope with the weather, which cut into Wall Street attendance and the interest of those unfortunate enough to be present. Trading greatly resembled that of the past several days, with a small turnover (around 1,000,000 shares), narrow and insignificant price movements, and a slight tendency to give up fractions. Bonds were quiet and fairly firm. Commodities reversed their course, the rains bringing heavy selling of grains. Corn dropped 4 cents a bushel. September wheat dropped 3 cents to 110¼ cents a bushel.

Stocks again were about as sticky as the weather, but nobody seemed to be bothered much, for neither the bulls nor the bears were inclined to do more than routine trading. Slow price erosion continued in some groups, and an equally unhurried building up of value occurred in others. Dealings were numerous enough to attract attention only in the airplane section and a handful of miscellaneous stocks.

One or two of the aviation stocks looked heavy at the start, but they grew firmer later. Sperry managed to sell at a new high price on considerable volume, although the news of the day was centered on Wright, which received a large Government order. Bendix, with a higher dividend, was a shade easier. Boeing continued to reward its followers by reaching a new high price.

Another strong group was the cement crowd, Alpha International and Lehigh Portland rose 1 to 2 points. Other building groups were firm, including the steels, but they seemed to be going nowhere in particular. With the exception of du Pont, anticipating an extra dividend, the chemicals were heavy.

Profit taking in the motor group dominated the market. General Motors opened lower, the extra dividend voted yesterday having been overdiscounted. Chrysler drooped a little. Rubber stocks also dipped and fractional losses were in the majority among the oils, in which group also some higher dividends have just been declared. Socony was rather active. New Jersey was firm.

Metal shares lacked speculative appeal and sank a little. The drop in farm commodities served to lift farm implement stocks, on the assumption that the drought would be less damaging than supposed before the present rains set in. Case recovered an early loss of 2 points. Yellow Truck was a star performer among the independent stocks, rivaling Sperry for attention.

Pressure on Francs.

With the fighting abroad growing more intense and with participation by other nations advancing from possibility to probability, the markets showed more concern. Trading in foreign exchange, well controlled at all points, was nevertheless slow. The fact that other gold currencies remained fairly stable with the pound sterling rendered more emphatic the weakness in French exchange, which again sank close to the level at which it would be profitable to send gold here from Paris.

In some quarters the fall in francs was set down to the passing of short covering brought about by the French government's decree requiring the reporting of foreign balances, but in other circles the Spanish situation was held to be chiefly responsible. It was pointed out that everybody had known for weeks the government would formally require the reporting balances, and that those most likely to be frightened into covering short positions took action weeks ago. French franc futures for 90 days weakened to a discount of 27½ points, as compared with 24 to 25¾ discount yesterday.

Unfavorable Possibilities.

On the home front, in the absence of the usual business indices, some attention was paid to the drought as a possible reducer of business activity. Those bearishly inclined hold the drought to be a factor which may cause a trade recession this autumn, as it did in 1934; but the sharp drop in corn prices today on reports of rain in the West lightened that cloud. In any event, the drought is not widespread enough to be a major factor in business. The most it is likely to do is to retard the pace of recovery, although it also is serving as an excuse for greater outpouring of Federal funds in the name of politics.

Another point the bears now are making is the closing of automobile plants in preparation for new models this autumn. The bonus inspired burst of buying apparently has passed, but a good deal of money will be available for spending this autumn in spite of the drought, what with farmers' doles, the higher prices for crops, the increased corporation dividends and the growing tendency of the population to spend instead of to save.

Banking Position.

For the first time this year changes in banking statistics in the Boston area dominated in the statement of weekly reporting banks in leading cities as of July 29. Miscellaneous and commercial loans for the country as a whole were $9,000,000 lower on the week, but in Boston the decrease was $15,000,000. Demand deposits adjusted went down $37,000,000 in Boston and increased $18,000,000 in Chicago and $10,000,000 in New York. Reserves rose $43,000,000 but the gain in this item in New York City was $61,000,000. A decline of $72,000,000 in domestic bank deposits was largely offset by a $65,000,000 decrease in due from domestic banks. Bank holdings of Government obligations went down $15,000,000, New York accounting for $14,000,000 of the decrease. Chicago banks bought nearly half of the amount disposed of by New York.

Banking Business.

There seems to be an epidemic of bank chartering in Chicago. The comptroller of the currency in the last week of July chartered three new national banks there, two of which were designated as "primary organizations," meaning that they did not arise through merger or through conversion of State banks. One, the Upper Avenue National, was a conversion of a State bank. One of the new national banks, the Cosmopolitan, has $250,000 capital, of which $150,000 came from the RFC. The other, the Central National, has $200,000 capital, all of one class. It had been the general impression here that Chicago had not been suffering from lack of banks.

Abnormal Statistics.

On the same day that the Association of American Railroads issued its summary of June earnings reports for 140 roads the Interstate Commerce Commission issued its new advance summary covering 144 roads. The percentage gains were the same. However, the ICC showed a curious timidity about computing the percentage increase in net railway operating income of the 59 carriers in the Western district, which rose from $2,863,485 to $15,588,455, or 544 per cent. The percentage was omitted "because the June, 1935, net railway operating income was abnormally low." It would be interesting to know just where and why the commission would draw the line of abnormality to justify omission of such statistics.

Demand Cuts World Balance Of U. S. Cotton

Carry-over Only Half of 1932, but Still Above Normal.

New York, Aug. 4.—The world carry-over of American cotton, that is, the world stock on August 1, was approximately 7,106,000 bales according to a preliminary estimate of the New York Cotton Exchange Service. This compares with 9,041,000 bales last year, 10,701,000 two years ago, and a maximum, in 1932, of 13,263,000 bales.

"In predepression years, the world carry-over of American cotton averaged about 5,000,000 bales," says the Exchange Service, "but that was at a time when world consumption of the American staple was averaging around 15,000,000 bales a year. If the carry-over is judged in relationship to consumption, which is now running between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 bales a year, a normal carry-over would be considered to be around 4,000,000 to 4,350,000 bales. Hence, although the world carry-over of American cotton this year is only a little more than half the maximum reached in 1932, it is well above the normal.

Government Loans.

"Of the carry-over of 7,106,000 bales this year, roughly 3,200,000 bales are being carried by the Government against loans to growers. This leaves around 3,900,000 bales in private hands. The stock in private hands is thus not far below normal, in relation to consumption. During the past year, the Government has reduced its holdings of spot cotton by close to 2,000,000 bales, the sale of which has largely averted a very tight spot situation this summer, except on qualities that are in relatively short supply.

"As has been the case in recent years, particularly during the period while the Government has been carrying large stocks, an unusually large portion of the carry-over is being carried in this country. The domestic portion of the carry-over this year is estimated at 5,481,000 bales, and the foreign portion only 1,625,000."

Utility Preferreds At Four-Year High

New York, Aug. 4.—Thirty-three public utility operating company preferred stocks closed July 31 at an average price of $88.93, compared with $87.93 on July 17.

This advance brought the index, compiled by Distributors Group, to one point above its previous high for the current bull market, which was reached on July 17, when the index stood at $87.93. This average represents a new high for the four years beginning July 18, 1932.

Class 1 Roads Make Big Cut in Deficit

The Interstate Commerce Commission reported yesterday that net income on class 1 railroads for the first five months of this year showed a deficit of $32,658,596, compared with a deficit of $56,194,880 for the same period last year. For May, the deficit was $2,419,574 against a deficit of $4,667,992.

Class 1 railroads are those with annual operating revenues above $1,000,000.

London, Aug. 4.—With business fairly active, the stock exchange recorded a firm tone today. Oils were strong and industrials quiet, with distilling, steel and engineering issues firm features. Transatlantic stocks turned irregular, while gilt-edged securities and home rails held steady. Kaffirs pushed forward.

Paris—An irregular price trend prevailed in the bourse today, with rentes weak. Bank of France shares also lost ground, while international and railroad issues moved ahead.

Liverpool—After continuing their boom movement with a rise of about 4 pence, wheat futures reacted partially, closing 2¼d to 2¼d higher. The strength in Winnipeg over the holiday and unfavorable harvesting weather in Europe was partially offset by realizing. Bombay and continental selling uncovered stop loss orders as cotton prices shot downward today. Late in the session prices steadied on covering, but fresh support was discouraged by improved crop prospects.

As advertising goes so goes business.

Cotton Declines Over $1 Per Bale

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—A further decline of slightly more than $1 a bale in cotton today was attributed to continued liquidation promoted by the trend toward increased crop ideas. December broke at 11.86, or 23 points net lower and closed at 11.88, with the general market barely steady at net declines of 20 to 24 points.

T. & W. Air to Build Fleet of Super Planes

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Jack Frye, president of Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., disclosed an airplane building program tonight involving an expenditure of $2,500,000. Frye said nearly $2,000,000 of the sum will be applied to building the nucleus of a fleet of "supertransport" aircraft, to develop research in four-engined transport planes, and to experiment in "overweather" flight with special equipment.

Accommodations for 23 persons, a special kitchen, new sound-proofing devices, and sleeper arrangements are called for. Frye said the new fleet is expected to be in service within six months.

Corn Tumbles With Rainfall In Crop Areas

Wheat Closings Average 3 Cents Lower in Active Trading.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Twice in succession grain values today suffered a major collapse, with corn in the lead smashing 4 cents down, the furthest immediate permissible limit.

Unexpected rains in corn belt areas where drought-stricken crops may yet receive some benefit, especially Iowa, led to the first of two selling stampedes, but in this instance a sharp upturn followed because of a big increase of buying when prices tumbled.

Wheat gave way with corn in a market that at times has seldom been surpassed for swift, wide price changes and activity of trading. Contributing to the acute weakness of values was the fact that at the close yesterday the market as based on December contracts was up 47 cents for corn, 28 cents for wheat and 19 cents for oats since June 1, a rise that in many quarters was construed as discounting damage for at least the present.

Corn closed nervous, 22¾ to 4⅛ cents under yesterday's finish; September, 106⅛-¼; December, 94⅞; May, 93½; Wheat, 2¾ to 3½ down; September, 110¼-½; December, 111⅜-½; May, 112 to 112¼; oats, 1½ to 2¼ off; December, 80⅞, and rye showing 1⅜ to 1⅝ drop; December, 80⅞. The outcome in provisions was unchanged to 25 cents lower.

Curb Prices Rally After Declines

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—A firmer tone late in the session dispelled some of the early softness in the curb market today and the main list closed with a steady undertone. Most of the losses were held to ⅛ point or less, but a few reached a point or so. Aluminum Co. of America was off 1¼ at 131¾, Commonwealth Edison, off 1 at 109; Creole Petroleum off 1¼ at 21¾, Newmont Mining off 1 at 86 and Pan-American Airways off 1 at 56½.

Niagara Hudson Power moved up ⅛ to 17¼ and Electric Bond & Share 6 per cent preferred gained 2 to 87. Molybdenum, Sunshine Mining and Cities Service were up fractionally. A considerable number of stocks closed unchanged for the day. The volume of shares traded totaled 278,000, compared with 252,000 Monday.

Associated Power Output.

New York, Aug. 4.—Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 80,522,623 units for the week ended July 25, an increase of 8,571,688 units, or 11.9 per cent over the same week in 1935.

2 U. S. Yachts 7th In Olympic Races

American Entries Lose in 6 and 8 Meter Classes.

By the Associated Press.

Kiel, Aug. 4.—With a stiff breeze whipping the Baltic into white-crested waves and rain squalls falling, all Olympic yacht classes today finished the first of seven races whereby places are decided.

America's entry in the international 6-meter class, the yacht Mystery, finished seventh. The American boat got away from the start 3 minutes late and was unable to recoup its loss despite excellent sailing. The boat passed Holland, Italy and Switzerland in the race, which was won by Sweden.

Hard bow-by-bow sailing decided the 8-meter class, in which Sweden finished first and the American yacht, Angelita, seventh.

When the star class event started, the wind increased and broke the mast of the French yacht. The American yacht, Three Star Too, finished third.

Failure to tack out of the middle of the 24 boats in the monotype class cost the American representative, piloted by Frank Jewett, a chance and it finished seventeenth.

Six-meter class—Won by Sweden; second, Germany; third, England; fourth, Finland; fifth, Norway; sixth, Argentina; seventh, United States.

Eight-meter class—Won by Sweden; second, Italy; third, Norway; fourth, England; fifth, Finland; sixth, Germany; seventh, United States; eighth, Argentina.

Star class—Won by Germany; second, Sweden; third, United States; fourth, England; fifth, Norway.

Monotype class—Won by England; second, Germany; third, Chile; fourth, Holland; fifth, Denmark; sixth, Sweden, seventeenth, United States.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

John Bradford Died Alcoholic, Inquest Shows

'He Had Been Drinking for Months,' Heiress-Widow Informs Police.

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Aug. 4.—A police investigation of the death of John Bradford, 31, husband of a New York heiress, the former Katrina Van Rensselaer, ended today when an autopsy showed he died of lobar pneumonia with acute alcoholism as a contributing cause.

The 27-yar-old widow was removed from the prison ward of the General Hospital today and taken by friends to a home in Glendale.

Bradford, an unemployed electrical engineer, was found dead yesterday on the floor of his disordered apartment.

"Drinking for Months."

"He had been drinking for months," Mrs. Bradford told the police. "I heard him come home in the night and stumble over furniture. I had a few drinks that night myself—just a few—and was too sleepy to get up. When I awoke in the morning I saw him on the floor."

She said she had had only a quart of milk for food in ten days.

Mrs. Bradford told detectives she inherited two fortunes of the Van Rensselaer family of New York and is a grand niece of E. H. Harriman, the railroad magnate.

Her Eyes Blackened.

Detectives who found Bradford's body reported Mrs. Bradford was in such a condition that it required nearly an hour to get her ready for transfer to the hospital. Both her eyes were blackened and she was bruised.

Mrs. Bradford said her husband was the son of Mrs. Della Bradford, of Greenville, Ill. She said her father was the late Fleming Van Rensselaer, son of Mrs. Anna H. Van Rensselaer, sister of E. H. Harriman.

Mrs. Hortense Sechrist, executrix of the Van Rensselaer estate, told the police Mrs. Bradford received a steady income from the estates of her parents, both dead, and from her aunt.

In Runaway Marriage.

Washington was reminded yesterday by the tragedy in Los Angeles, which resulted in the detention of Mrs. Katrina van Rensselaer Bradford by authorities, of how she figured in the headlines in an entirely different role here in 1927.

In that year the young debutante was invloved in a runaway wedding at Chestertown, Md., where she was married to Gustavo de Medina, an attache at the Spanish Embassy.

This romance lasted only 13 days. Lieut. Col. John M. Dunn, her stepfather, found out that the young diplomat had two other wives, one living in Spain, and that he had married without the formality of a divorce.

De Medina then promised to produce proof that he had obtained an annulment, but instead boarded a ship bound for Spain.

With his stepdaughter, Col. Dunn then appeared in District Supreme Court and she was granted an annulment. Then she went to California, where she was married to Melvin Morrisey six months later.

She married Bradford four years ago.

Illinois Police Guard Capitol In Bomb Threat

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 4.—An anonymous threat to bomb the Illinois Capitol brought 100 State policemen to the doors of the Statehouse today to stop a band of "hunger marchers" on the doorstep of the Legislature.

Capitol buildings and grounds were under heavy guard as the marchers arrived to make six demands for increased unemployment relief at opening of a special session of the General Assembly.

At the executive mansion, eight blocks away, eight troopers instead of the customary two guarded Gov. Henry Horner, who received the bombing threat. They had vivid recollections of a relief riot in the Governor's office in 1933.

Leaders of the marchers disclaimed responsibility for the letter, which said an "infernal machine" would be thrown into the Senate chamber and "members of the Legislature will go nome in boxes and on stretchers" * * * if you don't take up our program first."

"We want no violence," said Charles Rossio, of Duquoin, chairman of the Illinois Workers Alliance, sponsor of the march. He asserted, however, that he and his fellows would "camp on the doorstep of the Legislature until our relief demands are satisfied."

While the rest sulked in their tents, Rossio and nine others gained entrance to the Capitol, five to address the House. They condemned the Illinois relief program as "a failure" and held President Roosevelt "personally responsible."

Once known as one of the best steeplechase riders in the world, Donoghue will be buried today at Rochester, N. Y. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Irene Donoghue; a daughter, Betty, and a son, John Donoghue, who was graduated last year from St. John's College.

Derelict Dogs to Find Friend In District's New Poundmaster

Frank B. Marks Plans to Place All Strays In Proper Homes; He Says He Is 'A Man With a Heart,' Outlines Plans.

A humane policy of finding homes for derelict dogs, rather than destroying them, will be instituted when Frank B. Marks becomes poundmaster this week.

Marks, who was appointed by the District Commissioners yesterday from among more than a score of candidates, professed himself a "dog lover" and "a man with a heart."

An owner of a fine old collie, Marks has had years of experience in raising dogs, but as an amateur rather than a professional. Consequently he becomes somewhat sentimental when talking about them.

"Dogs are just like human beings in many ways," he philosophized. "They appreciate good treatment just like all of us do. My dog comes up to me and puts his head under my arm for a hug every night when I go home.

"There are enough persons around Washington to provide good homes for all the stray dogs that find their way to the pound, and I'm going to find 'em."

Marks, who has been acting captain of the guard at the District Building for the last several years, is 54 years old.

The post of poundmaster was made vacant two months ago by the death of Walter R. Smith.

Chemist Loses His Job; Linked To Legion Plot

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 4.—A city bacteriologist was discharged today by the board of health after his admission that a high officer of the Black Legion "approached" him nine months ago—and he did not report it—with a plot to contaminate milk delivered Jews with typhoid germs.

Dr. Henry F. Vaughan, city health commissioner, announced the dismissal of the bacteriologist, Charles T. McCutcheon, an employe in the milk analysis division of the health department.

Nothing came of the plot.

McCutcheon's dismissal was announced as defendants testified at the first Black Legion trial, in which six men are charged with kidnaping and flogging Robert Penland, a steel worker, for not attending meetings of the secret order.

Wilbur Robinson, a former Detroit street railway employe, testified he was a "brigadier general" in the legion and saw Penland at a meeting October 5, 1935, the night of the alleged flogging, but denied any whipping took place.

Frederick Gulley, a defendant, in a confession read into the trial record, told of a masked legionnaire lashing Penland "perhaps a dozen times."

Another development was Police Commisisoner John I. Navarre's report that Charles A. Poole's life was spared for ten days before his slaying May 12 because Black Legion assassins did not want to shoot at him while he carried a baby in his arms.

Details of Housing For Scouts Topic

The first of a long series of conferences in preparation for the Boy Scout Jamboree here next year was held yesterday, when E. S. Martin and Harvey A. Gordon, national officials, discussed housing plans with Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads and Frank T. Gartside, assistant superintendent of National Capital Parks.

Rep. Maverick Backs Students In Fight on Gag

By the Associated Press.

Austin, Tex., Aug. 4.—Representative Maury Maverick, of San Antonio, today aligned himself with students opposing faculty supervision of the Daily Texan, a newspaper published on the campus of the University of Texas, charging the action was "Nazifying" the school.

"That my university should adopt the policies of Communists and Fascists in suppressing freedom of speech is astonishing," he said in a statement.

"The board of regents has issued a decree Nazifying the university. Their ukase sounds almost exactly like the press decrees of Hitler, Communist Russia and Fascist Italy.

"University authorities should have judgment enough to know that if they restrict the liberties of others and put the gag on students, they will themselves have the gag put on them. Then the university itself will be responsible for the restriction of academic liberty."

Experienced Man Wanted.

Dr. N. Y. Benedict, president of the university, told Maverick the regents wished not so much to establish a censorship as to put an experienced newspaper man with censorship powers in charge of the student staff.

"Liberty means certain responsibility, which has been lacking in some cases in the past," Dr. Benedict was quoted as saying.

The specific incident which led to institution of the supervision was not clear. The Daily Texan, governed by a board of three faculty members, recently criticized editorially the Colorado River Authority management.

One of the first official acts of Granville Price, the faculty supervisor, was to "kill" an editorial by the student editor, Ed Hodge, commenting on a new tax plan for sulphur interests in Texas.

Protest Is Lodged.

Maverick also lodged a protest with President Benedict and H. J. Luther Stark, chairman of the board of regents, and sent telegrams asking intervention to President Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago, and Dr. J. W. Studebaker, national commissioner of education.
